VILLA'S HIDING PLACE FOUND

NEW MOVE AGAINST BANDIT

U. S. Troops Will Get Into Action When Fully Rested; Carranza Forces in Open Hostility

Washington, April 24.—Villa's hiding place is known.

General Funston received word at San Antonio today that the Mexican outlaw had again been definitely located.

But General Funston refused to tell the whereabouts of the bandit. He intimated, however, that the American troops would be in a position to round up Villa just as soon as the soldiers and horses had recuperated.

Alarming reports of open Carranzista hostility came to the border. A dispatch from El Paso today said that report had been received from Juarez of a large force of Carranza troops attacking a small body of American oldiers near Satero on Sunday, resulting in a battle in which many were killed or wounded.

Coincident with the statement from San Antonio that Funston had received definite report of Villa's whereabouts there came a despatch from Columbus relating to an engagement on April 10 between a band of Villistas and Major Howze's flying column of the Eleventh's cavalry. This was the clash in which Trooper Kirby was killed. Three other troopers were wounded.

REPORT VILLA WOUNDED

Major Howze, so the radiogram to Columbus said, received daily reports that Villa was wounded in the head. Bloody bandages were found at frequent points along the trail Villa took.

Major Howze believes Villa has gone West and South of Nacva but is still in Chihuahua.

The diplomatic side of the Mexican snarl received attention today in a dispatch from San Antonio containing official announcement from Fort Sam Houston that Major-General Hugh L. Scott, chief of staff of the United States

'Love Wife' of Rogers on Trial for Life as Slayer of Children

Mrs. Ida Walters Rogers, who pleads insanity as defence to charge of killing son and daughter.

Reinstate Miss Bosfield; Order Sent to Governor

The trustees of the Medfield State Hospital have issued on order requesting Superintendent Edward Prench of that institution to reinstate Miss Jane R. Bosfield, the colored stenographer who alleged that she was discharged because of race prejudice.

A copy of this order was forwarded to the Governor, in a communication to whom the trustees stated that the power to reinstate, discharge or hire employes is vested solely in the superintendent.

The communication was received by Secretary Stanley R. Miller, the Governor having been ordered home by his physician because of a cold.

By International News Service.

New York, April 24. — Mrs. Ida Sniffen Walters Rogers, who abandoned the position of a real wife to become the "other woman" in the life of Attorney Loriys Elton Rogers, was placed on trial today for the murder of two of the children, of which she and the lawyer were the parents.

The jury was completed before noon. Mrs. Rogers, who was accompanied in court by her husband, took little interest in the proceedings and appeared ill and anxious in mind.

Since last July Mrs. Rogers has been the legal wife of the attorney, and the couple have been living in seclusion with a child born a few weeks after the marriage.

The woman's call to court for trial for the tragedy of December, 1914, ended a happy honeymoon that had been passed in a neighborhood where neither Rogers nor his wife was known.

Insanity was the defence, and the accused woman's husband has been active in assisting her lawyer.

Mrs. Rogers administered bichloride of mercury to her children, John, aged two years, and Loriys, aged eight months, after taking the drug herself. Her plea was that she was so tortured in mind by the thought that she could not marry Rogers that she was not responsible. The double tragedy exposed Rogers' dual life, and his wife secured a divorce from him, opening the way to his marriage to Mrs. Walters.

Loriys Elton Rogers has been described as a sweet-tempered egotist.

BRAVES-BROOKLYN GAME OFF AGAIN

Rain caused another postponement in the Braves-Brooklyn series today. The Giants, with the famous Dazzy Kauff in their line-up, come here tomorrow for four games. The Dodgers left today for Philadelphia.

2 ON TRIAL FOR JUNK MURDER

F. J. Tracey and J. Rogers Accused of Slaying Samuel Cohen in South End Cellar Last Year

Charged with murder in the first degree for killing Samuel W. Cohen, an aged junk dealer, eleven months ago, the trial of Frank J. Tracey and Joseph (alias Delavan) Rogers, began today at a special session of the Superior Criminal Court, before Judge Hardy.

Ninety-four talesmen were on hand, and out of the first sixty examined only seven jurors were accepted. These were William Healy, leather handler, No. 20 Wesley avenue, Dorchester; Michael Rinn, shipper, No. 61 Auburn street; James Flinn; William J. O'Brien, blacksmith, No. 321 Allens street, South Boston; John J. Halligan, janitor, No. 10 Allen street, West End; John J. Curley, florist, No. 49 Juniper street; Ernest A. Reddy, provisions, No. 57 Decatur street, Charlestown, and William J. Connaughton, shipper, No. 14 Maryland street, Dorchester. It is not believed that a full jury will be secured before tomorrow.

A great deal of interest was manifested in the prisoners when they were brought in. Tracey, who was captured last month at Fort Madison, Iowa, was extremely pale and appeared worried. He wore a gray suit, blue four-in-hand tie with a white collar and black buttoned shoes. Rogers, who was arrested in New Jersey a few days after the murder, which took place May 25, 1915, was dressed in a blue suit, white turndown collar, low tie and low tan shoes.

Tracey was represented by John W. Connolly and Rogers by Richard J. Cotter, while District Attorney Pelletier appeared for the government.

Cohen, who lived at No. 21 Rose street, was the victim of two men who made a business of luring junkmen to the West Springfield street house and there robbing them. Mrs. Martha Bean, the housekeeper, is now being held as a material witness, although she declared that she had no knowledge of what was taking place.

On the afternoon of May 25 a junk dealer named Morris Taitel, No. 6 Vernon street, Roxbury, was taken to the house, robbed of $16 and locked into a closet in the kitchen, which was located in the basement.

While Taitel crouched in the closet, afraid to move, Cohen was brought in, robbed and shot to death. After exhibiting the body to Taitel the men again locked him into the closet, buried Cohen's body under a heap of ashes and fled.

Fearful that he would meet the fate of the other dealer, Taitel remained in the closet for some time, at length mustering courage to break out when he heard the voice of a woman calling a cat.

TREACHERY IN 'BIG 4' DEAL

Democratic Politicians Said to Be Involved in the G. O. P. Tangle; Hit at McCall, Says Mr. Lawson

Reports were rife in Boston today that large sums of money had been paid to Democratic politicians to bring Democratic votes to the support of one, or possibly two, members of the Weeks-Crane-Lodge-McCall ticket in the Republican presidential primaries tomorrow.

The report predicts an attempt at wholesale debauchery of the Boston Democratic electorate.

Thomas W. Lawson, the copper king and friend of Governor McCall, declared today, in a half-page advertisement printed in all the Boston newspapers now, his signature, that the scheme had been hatched to elect two of the Old Guard Big Four through Democratic votes.

Mr. Lawson declares that the scheme is not only to secure the election of two of the Old Guard Big Four, but that it is a plot of the machine leaders to discredit Governor McCall.

In addition to Governor McCall, the other Big Four candidates are Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Senator John W. Weeks and former Senator W. Murray Crane.

GOVERNOR HARNESSED.

Mr. Weeks is a Presidential candidate. Politicians said today that Governor McCall and Senator Lodge probably would be elected, but that Mr. Weeks, and possibly Mr. Crane, seemed destined to be defeated by the Young Guard forces pledged to Roosevelt.

Mr. Lawson begins his allegations with a history of the present political fight, including the overtures that were made to persuade Governor Mc-

EXPECT TO AMEND BILL FOR JAPANESE

By the International News Service.

Washington, April 24.—The Burnett immigration bill probably will be amended as a result of the Japanese protest against certain features of the measure, it was learned on high authority today, following a conference between secretary of State Lansing, Senator Stone, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, and Senator Smith of South Carolina, chairman of the Senate immigration committee.

NEWLANDS AGAIN URGES PEACE MOVE

Washington, April 24. — Senator Newlands in the Senate today urged that the United States improve the present opportunity "when the relations of Germany and America are in the balance," to again sound out the warring nations with a view to bringing about a peace conference. Senator Newlands' resolutions for peace negotiations, introduced several days ago, were referred to the Foreign Relations Committee at his own request.

Latest War Bulletins

Newcastle-on-Tyne, Eng., April 24.—The government's conscription policy was strongly denounced at a meeting of the Independent Labor party today. Chairman Gowett said that the party would refuse to assist the government in an adventure bound to be disastrous to the country, no matter what the outcome of the military operations.

Berne, April 24.—An undated dispatch from Berlin contains the semi-official announcement that the Turkish forces operating around Kut-el-Amara in Mesopotamia have been reinforced by a considerable number of Germans.

Paris, April 24.—Russian troops that were landed in France last week have begun arriving at the western front to reinforce the French. A dispatch from Chalons-sur-Marne today conveyed this information and gave the impression that the Russians would either be used at Verdun or else at some other point on the southeastern line.

London, April 24.—A German aeroplane attempted today to raid the channel port of Dover. The War Office announced this afternoon that the hostile machine had been driven off. It stated further there had been no damage.

Berlin, via Sayville Wireless, April 24.—Denial is made through the Overseas News Agency that Russia has made any peace overtures to Germany.

Elevated Cuts Dividend Down to 5% for Year

Boston Elevated directors have cut the dividend to stockholders. They have declared a quarterly distribution of 1¼ per cent, or the final quarter of present fiscal year, which ends June 30.

For the year, the stockholders will get 5 per cent in dividends. They got 6% per cent in the previous fiscal year and it is the one before that President W. A. Bancroft said to the stockholders.

On July 26, 1915, near the beginning of the current fiscal year, directors wrote you as follows:

"But net income of the company has been seriously affected by the large increase in the cost of labor and material and by the loss of fare. Such increases have been constantly imposed upon the company, and in the judgment of directors it is not likely to be sufficient to provide for continuing 6 per cent dividends, unless some relief is provided either by an increase in the cost of fare or otherwise."

The suspension of the 6 cent fare has proved this statement to be only too true.

LOSS ON CHINESE TRANSPORT GROWS

Shanghai, April 24.—Additional details of the sinking of the Chinese transport, Hsin-Yu, received here today, indicated that about 1,400 lives were lost instead of a thousand as reported. The Hsin-Yu, which was carrying troops to Foo Chow, collided with the cruiser Hai-Yung south of Chusan Islands on Saturday night.

10 PER CT. INCREASE TO 18,000 IN LOWELL

Lowell, April 24—Eighteen thousand cotton mill operatives went to work today under a 10 per cent. increase in pay. An increase was recently announced, but the amount was not learned until the rates became effective today.

Believes German Ships Will Stay Fast at Piers

Collector of the Port Edmund Billings, back at his desk after an absence since Wednesday, declared today that the German and Austrian ships in Boston would remain at their present berths and not move to the lower harbor.

Two important communications awaited Collector Billings' return to duty. One was a telegram from Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Newton, inquiring as to the plans of the commanders of the German and Austrian vessels. The other was Mayor Curley's letter requesting the removal of the vessels to the lower harbor for fear of property damage should they try to break away.

Collector Billings said:

"I have no knowledge that the commanders of the German and Austrian ships intend to leave their present berths. No notice of any such move has been given to me. I do not think they will do so, as they are much safer in their present berths. Our navy would be a President Roose-

KAISER TO YIELD IS REPORT

Gerard to Confer with High German Officials; Teuton Statesmen Would Avoid Rupture

Washington, April 24.—Dispatches from Ambassador Gerard at Berlin today indicate that the forthcoming answer of Germany to the United States ultimatum in the Lusitania controversy will make considerable concessions to America.

Whether these concessions will be acceptable to the United States remains to be seen, but a general air of hopefulness pervades the Capital this morning.

The reply itself, it is believed, will be presented to the Ambassador by Wednesday or Thursday at the latest, and be laid before President Wilson by Saturday. This belief was further strengthened by the receipt of unofficial advices from Berlin indicating that the German government had decided upon its reply to the American note.

By International News Service.

Berlin, April 24.—Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg, the Imperial Chancellor, is expected to confer today with James W. Gerard, the United States ambassador, and it is believed the German reply to the ultimatum of the United States will have been sent to Washington before forty eight hours have elapsed.

Since the ultimatum received from great headquarters, where he confered with the Kaiser, speculation as to the German reply has been general, but no one outside of government officials knew what attitude Germany would assume.

It was hoped, the Foreign Minister, after a course of data before him, and it was considered likely that he [illegible] would confer with Dr. Gerard [illegible] today or this evening, [illegible] the German reply would be ready for [illegible] to believe very earnestly that Germany would not [illegible] the United States would countenance to exact concessions from the allies, inasmuch as Germany has already lived up to [illegible] blockade is illegal and that [illegible] which are the subject of [illegible] ments of the laws of neutrality as the [illegible] of the outside powers [illegible] Germany is dependent on the [illegible] of the women and children of [illegible] for her supplies.

Cost of Break with U. S. Too Great for Germany, Says Maximilian Harden

Special to the International News Service and London Daily Telegraph.

Rotterdam, April 24.—A bombshell has been thrown into the midst of the German-American crisis by Maximilian Harden in the form of an issue of his paper, "Die Zukunft" entirely devoted to a long and amazing polemic entitled "If I were Wilson."

Editor Harden expressed his views in the form of an imaginary message from President Wilson. It begins:

"Listen, mankind, to the message of a man," and Harden then proceeds to state the whole case of America against his fellow countrymen. Following are some quotations from the issue:

"Germany accuses us of helping her enemies with war material. We have a right to do it. It is not our fault that Germany cannot be a client.

"German industry, in all modern wars, notwithstanding her own frailty, delivered to one party and often to both, weapons, and ammunition. The law of these unchallenged rights of our manufacturers has brought bitter reproach from the Germans. Many of these have thought they must change themselves into a pompous wing-nut of the Fatherland.

"Fools of the bartering of their criminal speculations lie in our archives. I only ask: Would Germany have allowed during the Manchurian war, Japanese agents to work in Prussian Poland, and by agitation and sending false munitions factories frighten Germany into enmity against Russia?

WANT AMERICANS PROTECTED.

"In our demand of rights not equal to that of Germany? I demand that Germany publicly disassociate herself from every command of the foolish patriots who misuse our hospitality to spread civil peace.

"I demand that Germany shall, without reserve, protect the life and property of American citizens of any.

"No longer may the question of whether two great peoples shall live in friendship or enmity depends upon the whim or nerve of a young submarine commander.

"Germany must choose between two wishes as to receive the Fatherland and who only listens to reconsider what it says. 'Down with everything which cracks.'

"To give way would be reckoned as neither side or weakness, but only the expression of reasonable will of two peoples to preserve friendly intercourse. The result of a break would be that our whole hemisphere, north and south, would be whole enemies of Germany, and not only for the duration of the war.

WORLD PROLONG WAR.

"Germany would lose all her ships lying in American harbors and have to reckon with a considerable increase in the efficiency of munitions. From the day of the break she would have to provision Belgium herself. The whole of Holland and Scandinavia could scarcely hope for more supplies by sea and would become in need themselves and with nothing more to strangers.

"Whether at such a high price the loss of power to England by lack of food and shipping should be bought, Germany alone must decide.

"The end of the war would then depart into the dim distance is certain.

"At that moment, too, we should have a united front in America. The Germans, Irish and Austro-Hungarians in our land would at once forget everything except that they were one under the Stars and Stripes.

"Germany would then have to reckon with a new factor, namely, the whole of America, which would be ready to take up arms against Germany. Then would the empire run the danger of losing the hundred million dollars worth of German ships now in American ports. It does not follow a break with America would be followed by a break with Japan, but it would be a reinforcement of the dangers that confront the German Empire.

"Germany is in all matters of international law, and especially those relating to the conduct of submarine warfare, in the wrong. Her submarines have violated the principles of humanity and the immunity of private property. Germany has not only violated the principles of international law, but has also violated the principles of humanity and the immunity of private property. Germany has not only violated the principles of international law, but has also violated the principles of humanity and the immunity of private property.

DIG WRONG CELLAR, HE SAYS

Providence, April 24.—Octave Charles Genoures, the convict serving a two-year sentence as Edward C. Glenorfis, declared today that the New York police must have searched the wrong house, hunting the body of Dorothy Arnold, which he said he helped bury in a cellar in West Point.

He explained that the cellar under the rented floor of which he is confident reside the remains of Dorothy Arnold, was not partitioned into rooms, as was the cellar described by the New York police as the one they searched.

RESENTS POLICE INACTION.

Genoures himself, surprised at the publicity given his statement, is resentful at what he calls the inaction of the New York police. He declares that they have taken so much time getting around to making their search that if the "gang" was half awake it would be the easiest thing in the world to forestall the police and "cover up." Genoures said today:

If the police dug up a cellar with two or three rooms partitioned off they did not get the right house. As you go down the stairs to the cellar where Dorothy Arnold is buried there is but one room partitioned off, at the extreme left of the staircase.

On the right of the stairs is the furnace. Near the right-hand corner the girl is buried. It is directly in front of the door of the furnace, about ten feet from it. With the exception of the one room with the panelled door at the left of the stairs, the rest of the cellar is open.

There's more to this than appears on the surface. I believe relatives of the girl know more than they want made public. If they think I am lying, why don't they call the bluff?

GOT THE WRONG HOUSE.

I read that they found a house near the fork in the road. If that is so then they sure didn't find the right house, as told Lieutenant Williams when he was here that we drove one or fifteen minutes beyond the fork in the road.

I'll bet there's been a lot of covering up since that story was made public. If they find the right house, they will find the body where I describe unless the gang got busy when they read the papers. In that case they will find traces of the gang's having been there.

If things are coming so easy for Louie, let him take a trip here in the prison, with a New York policeman. I'll relate a few details of the job that will refresh his memory.

Lieutenant Grant Williams, head of the bureau of missing persons of the New York police, who has already had one conference with Genoures, is expecting to have another talk with him. When he was here the first time, the offer was made to him to take Genoures along, but Williams declined to make the request for the New York police without further authority. It is expected that he will come armed with this authority today.

American Aviator Loses Leg, But Wins a Bride in the War

Theodore Marburg, Jr., and his bride, who was the Baroness Gessalle de Vivario, a Belgian noblewoman. Young Marburg, American aviator and son of a former United States Minister to Belgium, lost a leg on the battlefields of France fighting for his wife's country. He is here to get an artificial one that he may return and rejoin the conflict.

HEAR BAY STATE EXPERT ON TRIP TO WEST

Robert M. Feustel, the $50 a day expert, who has figured prominently in the Bay State hearing before the Public Service Commission, today resumed the stand. He was cross-examined by Attorney Arthur G. Wadleigh of Lynn, about "one-man" cars, a trip to Cleveland, in which a Lynn newspaper editor figured, service and depreciation.

The most interesting testimony of the morning session was about a trip to Cleveland by Mr. Feustel. Mr. Wadleigh attempted to show that F. W. Enwright, a Lynn newspaper man, accompanied Mr. Feustel on the trip, and was employed to do so by the Bay State Company.

Q.—Did you go to Cleveland for the company? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who ordered you to go? A.—Mr. Sullivan, president of the road.

Q.—Who went with you? A.—Mr. Enwright, a Lynn newspaper man.

Q.—For whom did he go? A.—I understood that he went to get data for his publication pertaining to the Cleveland traction system.

Q.—Was he employed by the company to go there with you? A.—I don't know. It's my impression that he was not. He went, I believe, on his own account.

Chairman Macleod of the commission suggested that if Mr. Enwright was to figure in the case that he should be called as a witness.

The witness was questioned relative to the so-called "one-man" cars. Witness stated that they were preferable on "stub" lines. He did not suggest their use on any of the Bay State lines. He stated that every up-to-date street railroad was using prepayment cars. Attorney Wadleigh then asked him if he thought the Bay State road was an up-to-date road, but he did not answer. Attorney Jackson, representing the road, jumped to his feet and said:

"The road bought 200 of these cars, Mr. Wadleigh."

"When?" asked Mr. Wadleigh.

"Last August," said Mr. Jackson, "we ordered one car to be used for exhibition purposes."

This caused considerable laughter.

I DEAD, 1 WOUNDED IN STREET DUEL

Portland, Me., April 24.—Giovanni Picatelli died today from wounds received in a pistol duel with Agostino Cataldi in front of the former's home at No. 65 Fore street. Cataldi was seriously wounded in the right breast and was taken to a hospital with Picatelli.

Strike Riot in Albany.

Albany, N. Y., April 24.—Threatened by rioting strikers, Policeman Edward S. Murphy shot and probably fatally wounded Giutano Nigris, a bodycarrier, today. Police reserves were called out and in the fighting that followed a dozen persons were wounded. Twenty arrests were made.

New York, April 24.—One of the romances of the European war was told today, by Theodore Marburg, Jr., an American aviator, who arrived yesterday on the St. Louis with his bride, the Baroness Gessalle de Vivario.

The romance has its darker side. Mr. Marburg left his left leg on the field of battle. He said to his native land: "I will go home and get an artificial limb. Then I will come back to continue the fight for his wife's country. Mrs. Marburg is a Belgian noblewoman.

Marburg is son of the former American Minister to Belgium. He is a graduate of Oxford. On December 6 last, while scouting over the German lines at an altitude of only 300 feet a wing of his aeroplane was damaged and the machine plunged to earth. One of the struts severed his left knee. He was later taken to England, where he met the Baroness de Vivario. The romance culminated in their marriage at Netley on April 10.

Mr. Marburg said that while he was serving in Belgium he had a talk with King Albert and the Queen of Belgium.

"King Albert told me," he said, "that the only thing which saved Belgium from starvation was the generosity of the United States. The Queen told me she was much relieved there was no more court duty and that she had an opportunity to serve humanity."

FINED FOR LIVELY EASTER BATTLE

Several arrivors of a pitched battle at No. 26 West Broadway, while about fifty men were enjoying a holiday session yesterday, were in South Boston Court today as witnesses against men charged with assault and battery.

Of the defendants, Stephen Yunevitch was fined $30, and Benedict Dinnahi and Charles Sarcusa $20 each for assault and battery on Adam Lass, Peter Kanovitch and Joseph Scarbone, respectively. Several of the participants of the Easter day battle are in the City Hospital.

BRYAN AND FORD PLAN NEW PARTY

Washington, April 24.—Political circles discussed a rumor that William Jennings Bryan, Henry Ford and George B. McClellan, former Mayor of New York, will organize a new national party and put a presidential ticket in the field next Fall. It was stated they would gather soon in Harrisburg, Pa., to discuss their plans.

Mr. Bryan believes, it is declared, there are enough voters opposed to war and preparedness to justify the move. Mr. Ford, it was said, might head the new party.

SEEK MAN'S BODY, FIND A WOMAN'S

Pawtucket, R. I., April 24.—While dragging the Pawtucket river today for the body of a missing man, the police found the body of a woman between the ages of thirty and thirty-five years. Patrolmen Wadsworth and Moon were searching for the body of James H. Redmond, who is believed to have committed suicide two weeks ago. They saw the woman's body float over the falls. It was turned over to Medical Examiner Charles H. French.

WARN U. S. TROOPS IN MEXICO

army, would confer with General Alvaro Obregon, the Carranza Minister of War, at Eagle Pass. This place is more than 1,000 miles from Mexico City, so it is not expected that General Obregon will arrive there before Saturday.

The result of this conference is expected to determine the future attitude of the United States governmental with reference to keeping our troops in Mexico on a continued hunt for Villa.

NO WORD OF CONFLICT.

El Paso dispatches relating the Juarez report of a battle at Satevo on Sunday quoted General Gavira, the Carranza leader at Juarez, as saying that he had "no official word of any such conflict."

Satevo is north of Parral and is the point to which the American troops fell back after the Parral encounter.

Major General Funston said today that he was without any information as to the reported fight near Satevo, but admitted that the rumors coming from Mexico anyway might have reached the border before any report from General Pershing, who has not been heard from for twenty-four hours.

The Mexican situation is now entering its second and more serious phase. The decision of the United States government to keep the hunt for Francisco Villa in defiance of the demands of the de facto Mexican government is expected to force the hand of the Mexican officials.

WARNS AMERICANS.

Complete evidence that this was given by notification from General Guitierrez, military commander of the state of Chihuahua, that if the American troops attempted to move south of the point where they were concentrated they will be subject to attack by Carranza forces. General Gavira, before sent his warning to United States Consul Letcher at Chihuahua City to be delivered to the Washington government.

Consul Letcher is reported to have sent the information given him to Washington.

The warning from Guitierrez, in the opinion of officers at Fort Bliss, rendered the situation most critical. Coming at the moment that Mexican officials officials were awaiting President Wilson's formal reply to the demand that American troops be withdrawn.

In the meantime General Luis Herrera, the "prince" of the Carranza strong Carranza forces about him in the vicinity of Chihuahua.

The Villista bands they are resuming their activity in burning wrecking trains and raiding villages and ranches. Then there was the wreck carried when they wrecked two trains 100 miles west of Chihuahua City, killing 24 Mexicans.

Major Howze Reports Fight With Outlaws

Nanniquipa, Mexico, April 24 (via Radio to Columbus, N. M.—April 24.—Trooper Kirby was killed and three others were wounded in an engagement on April 19 between a band of Villistas and Major Howze's flying column of picked horsemen of the Eleventh Cavalry, according to a report made to General Pershing by Major Howze on his arrival here today.

The engagement, which extended over several miles, took place at Tasceya. Many of the bandits were killed—the exact number being undetermined. Major Howze's men and wearied column made camp here on April 20 after a hard day's march, riding hard on the trail of Pancho Villa for thirty days.

Major Howze carried them 600 miles south of the Rio Grande—twenty miles farther than any other American force have gone in the pursuit of the pugnitive expedition.

Villa, Major Howze reported, is believed to have gone west and south of Nanna, and probably still is in the State of Chihuahua.

The closest Major Howze's column could get to the fleeing bandit was about two days' journey.

Major Howze believes that Villa is wounded. During his fight southward, in pursuit of the rebel chieftain, reports were daily brought in by Mexicans that Villa was wounded in the head. At several points along his trail, Major Howze said, bloody bandages were found.

Besides the news of Villa's whereabouts and the engagement Major Howze also reported that he narrowly escaped a clash with a strong force of Carranzistas under General Cavaras at San Borja.

When the American forces drew near the town, the Mexicans were drawn up in formation, ready to charge. Spurring his horse forward, Major Howze rode between the two forces and waved his hat in greeting.

After some hesitation, he reported General Cavaras rode forward to meet him, and after a conference the Mexican general dispersed his men.

Two Wills Made by Brockton Man Filed in Court

Brockton, April 24.—Two wills of James Hogan, the homeless Civil War veteran whose death three days ago revealed a mystery, were filed today in the Probate Court here. He left a fortune totalling.

The first will was dated September 19, 1911, and the second will was dated December 19, 1914, just before his death.

Hogan's former House, Jr., is the principal beneficiary, while his wife, Mrs. Sarah A. White, he had not lived for more than twenty years, is left $100 under the first will and $1 in the 1914 instrument.

John Thomas Hogan of Boston and W. [illegible] of this city, represented as the next of kin, appeared in the Probate Court today. Some of the city and State officials, including Paul Revere Frothingham, Commissioner of Public Welfare, Alfred Harlow and Elmer Fleming, were also present.

Notice of the will of the woman with whom Hogan lived was given $5,000 in the will, but in the codicil this was increased to $10,000. Hogan, Jr., is named as executor of the two wills.

Given 30 Days as Aftermath to Wedding Fete

As an aftermath to a wedding reception attended by Mrs. Catherine McCann of Middlesex street, Charlestown, she was today sentenced to thirty days in the House of Correction by Judge Sullivan in the Charlestown Police Court.

Mrs. Mary A. Fraser, the woman's mother, with whom she resides, testified that her daughter returned from the reception at 2:30 o'clock this morning. Mrs. Fraser refused, she testified, when she was thirty years old, for starting out so early and was slapped in the face for her pains.

After that, according to Mrs. Fraser, the young woman became displeased that she threw a lamp at her uncle, and created so much noise that Policeman Chandler hurried to the house. As he entered the room Mrs. McCann, with linen from a set, greasy towel as a weapon, according to the testimony, and was only subdued after a struggle.

Daring Holdup Man Robs Cash Register--of $1.15

The police today sought a young man who at the point of a revolver secured $1.15 from the cash register in the all night restaurant of Bernard Rogers, No. 1114 Washington street.

According to James Farrell, the night clerk, the man walked into the restaurant early today, produced a revolver, polished it at Farrell, and commanded him to put up his hands. Farrell hurriedly complied, and the other opened the cash register, and took the contents, amounting to $1.15. Then, regardless of the fact that the clerk, regardless left the restaurant and disappeared.

He is described as being about 20 years of age, 5 feet 7 inches tall, slim build, dark complexion, dark eyes, dark clothes and black golf cap.

FRENCH GAIN MORE GROUND IN DRIVE NORTHWEST OF VERDUN

By International News Service.

London, April 24.—Further progress was made by the French offensive on the front northwest of Verdun last night.

In an attack with hand-grenades in Caurette's Woods (West of the Meuse) the French took thirty prisoners.

Announcement of the French gains was contained in an official communique issued by the French war office today.

The communique states that the Germans, finding French resistance unbroken, resumed their useless tactics of violently bombarding the French positions on Le Mort Homme (Dead Man's Hill).

The text of the French official communique follows:

"North of the Aisne a German reconnaissance force which tried to penetrate into our lines on the plateau of Paissy was repulsed with losses.

"West of the Meuse during the night we dispersed numerous hostile detachments forces southeast of Haucourt (Northwest of Caurettes Wood was disturbed by means of a grenade attack into the enemy's communicating trenches and took one hundred prisoners, of whom one was an officer.

"The enemy bombarded very sharply the region of Le Mort Homme.

"East of the Meuse and in the Woevre the night was relatively quiet. At Eparges the German explosion a mine without causing us any damage. In the forest of Apremont our artillery was active and replied effectively to the trench engines of our adversary.

"In the Vosges we captured a small German post in the direction of Hilsen Holtzen.

"In Belgium during the day of April 23 and the night of April 24 our aerial squadron twice bombarded the station of Wytsaege, east of Houthulst forest. Thirty and then eighteen shells of large calibre, most of which reached their targets, were dropped upon the station buildings. All our aviators returned safely."

The Berlin official report says attacks by the French on both sides of the Meuse river in the Verdun sector were repulsed. Northeast of Avocourt and east of Dead Man's Hill French infantry assaults were launched against the German positions, but all were failures.

East of the Meuse, near Thiaumont farm, the attack of the French, although very determined, broke down under the fire of the Germans.

The German War Office report indicated that the counter offensive of the French on the Verdun front is becoming stronger.

Another attack was delivered by the English at St. Eloi, West Flanders, but was repulsed by the Germans.

Artillery fire was more active on the whole West front.

Following is the text of the official report:

"West front: The artillery was more active all along the front. At several points, the Germans carried out successful patrol operations.

"South of St. Eloi, English detachments which tried to advance were repulsed by our fire.

"West of the Meuse river, on the Verdun front, the French made attacks with hand-grenades against our forest positions northeast of Avocourt, but were repulsed. An attempt of the enemy to advance east of Dead Man's Hill failed.

"A strong attack by the French at Thiaumont farm broke down.

"English biplanes were put out of action in an air engagement east of Arras. The occupants, all officers, were captured.

"East front: There is nothing to report.

"Balkan front: The positions are unchanged."

WAR SUMMARY

There is no end of speculation as to the answer Germany will make to our submarine ultimatum, but the slightest hint of anything official or even semi-official has yet to come from Berlin. A conference was scheduled for today between Ambassador Gerard at Berlin and Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg, who has just come back from a conference with the Kaiser at the Imperial field headquarters on the German side of the Verdun battle line. Dr. von Jagow, the German Foreign Minister, is expected to see Gerard soon. It is from the informal conference between our ambassador and such eminent German officials as these that some advance hint of the German answer may drift out.

The actual answer, Berlin dispatches say, may be handed to Gerard by Wednesday or Thursday. It will have to be coded, cabled and decoded, which takes due time.

Fighting in France continues mainly an artillery duel. An early Paris communique today reported a French attack with hand grenades against German positions in Caurette's Woods, west of the Meuse, with the capture of thirty Teuton prisoners.

German gunners have resumed heavy shelling of French positions on Dead Man's Hill.

The Spring freshet proposition is a factor in the Belgian lowlands, high floods having driven the Germans out of trenches just won at Ypres.

Russia claims the capture of a Turkish sector fifty miles west of Erzerum, but Constantinople meets this with official claim to forcing the Russians back toward Bitlis to blocking a Russian sally from Trebizond.

A Russian communique of April 14 said that an enemy aviator dropped bombs upon Ivanitz on the Dneister, where Emperor Nicholas was reviewing troops. The Overseas News Agency gave out a report today that the Emperor was hurt by one of the bombs.

REPORT CZAR INJURED BY AIR BOMB

Berlin (wireless via Sayville), April 24.—Czar Nicholas was injured by a bomb dropped by an aviator during the Russian ruler's recent visit to the southwest front, according to Stockholm's reports, says the Transocean News Bureau.

The bureau's statement follows:

Stockholm reports say that during the last visit of the Czar to the southern front, an Austro-Hungarian airman caused a serious alarm.

The Czar was reviewing recruits in company with General Brussiloff, when suddenly an Austro-Hungarian flyer appeared and dropped numerous bombs, which hit part of the troops.

The panic-stricken recruits fled in wild disorder.

The Czar was hurt and had a narrow escape from death, while he completely lost countenance.

As a consequence General Brussiloff was bitterly reprimanded, and General Ivanoff was recalled to headquarters on the southwest front.

LANSING ASKS IGEL'S PAPERS BE RETURNED

Washington, April 24.—Attorney-General Gregory today ruled that diplomatic immunity from arrest does not extend to cases in which a diplomat is guilty of criminal offenses against the government of the United States.

The ruling was made at the request of Department of Justice officials, who are handling the case of Wolfe von Igel, arrested on charges of being involved in the plot to destroy the Welland Canal.

Secretary of State Lansing today sent to the Department of Justice a formal request that the department return at once to Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, the official papers seized when Von Igel was arrested in his New York office.

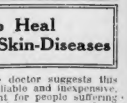
The suit of Blanche L. Burton of this city against Joseph Dowdoll Bradlees of Florissant Tilar County, Colorado, for $50,000 for alleged breach of promise, has been settled out of court, according to documents at the Suffolk County Superior Court. The settlement states that it is without costs to the defendan.

How to Heal Skin-Diseases

A Baltimore doctor suggests this simple, but reliable and inexpensive home treatment for people suffering with eczema, ringworm, rashes and similar itching, burning skin troubles.



At any reliable druggist's get a jar of resinol ointment and a cake of resinol soap. These are not at all expensive. With the resinol soap and warm water bathe the affected parts thoroughly until they are free from crusts and the skin is softened. Dry very gently, spread on a thin layer of the resinol ointment, and cover with a light bandage—if necessary to protect the clothing. This should be done twice a day. Usually the distressing itching and burning stop with the first treatment and the skin soon becomes clear and healthy again. Sample free, Dept. 4-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

ROOSEVELT—McCALL

TO GOVERNOR McCALL

My Dear Governor—

As you know, the world is of two classes, winners and their boot-lickers—under dogs and their cousins. Unfortunately some of us have uncontrollable aversion for the centipede-shuffled stirrup kissers.

I say this to excuse my not having seen enough of you since your election to the governorship to know whether your supporters equipped vision is acutely and truly focused to the all-obscuring question of the rising hour, or whether, in your intense determination to give to the affairs of the State you so splendidly grace as Chief Executive, and to its citizens who so honored themselves in honoring you, that unrelenting supervision which is necessary to the fulfilment of your and your party's promises, you have not over or underlooked your relation to the subject which is right now of paramount vitalness to all the people of the nation—the coming presidential nomination and election.

For the facts which I herewith submit I have no apology. In front-porching my opinions and conclusions I presume upon our long friendship and my quarter century unswerving devotion to your public and private self, pointing you, whenever I become meganomic, to the times I have answered the whistle of your political exigency—exigency birthed in the nimble rattle-snaking of some of your present presidential campaign cot-sharers.

By way of explanation, not apology, for my length and scatteringness, I lantern the fact that we of today live under the guns of the political trough-wallower's bloated presumption that to him and the press, alone, should be left the selection of the public's officials, and the twin fact that the professional politicians cannot comprehend the "nerve" which, upon balloened occasions like the present, pilots the plain citizen (who, through his labor, his private and public benefactions, and his pro bono publico activities pays the politicians' bills and plugs the leaks and cavities made by the politicians' elected tools' graftings) abreast a to-hell-with-the-consequences protest against existing politician-made conditions.

Because of my past public work and my present relation to the country's "doers"—statesmen, editors, magazine writers, financiers, "Big Business" controllers, labor leaders and followers, of all political parties—I have rare opportunity to squint the people's trend; besides, it being common knowledge that I have no axe to grind, no favor to accept, the "doers" of the country "think out loud" to me on occasions such as the present.

I have just finished stethoscoping the country's yeomanry and unsolicitedly jumping the nation's "doers" with the following result.

Owing to a peculiar combination of conditions the present administration, the best since Lincoln's, must be replaced.

The mind of the people is—the present unprecedented, but as yet temporary prosperity must be permanently mast-headed at the war's end.

"Big Business"—"Money," "Industrial," "War Goods," "Transportation" Trusts—know that present prosperity cannot be made permanent unless "Big Business" is relieved from Federal supervision, regulation.

There has just been created 50 billions of new wealth.

This new wealth is as yet only paper. If it can be made permanent, present prosperity will not only be continued after the War's end, but will be even greater than now.

To make permanent this 50 billions of new wealth, there must be "collected" annually from the industries of the nation two and a half billion dollars (5% on 50 billions) in addition to the amount formerly "collected," which is to be "collected" only through the absolute control of the nation's industries by "Big Business," the absolute control of the next administration by "Big Business."

"Big Business" believes that a continuation of the present administration will make impossible the "collection" of this absolutely necessary additional two and a half billion dollars.

"Big Business" believes that if it cannot replace the present administration with a new one (preferably an old-school Republican, but if this is impossible, then by a Roosevelt), chaos will be with us at the war's end.

Two years ago, "Big Business" had completely concluded that the "drowning" of the present Democratic administration and the resurrection of one of the old-patterned Republican administrations must unparalleled prosperity and incidentally more billions of wealth to "Big Business" that it determined at any cost to down the one and resurrect the other, and therefore "Big Business" pledged "Big Business" to a fund of unlimited millions to bring about the decreed result. Then, two years ago, it perfected a combination for the preservation of the nation and the exploitation of the American voter.

Because of the work of this organization, the American people today see the light and Republican success at the coming election is inevitable.

Decreeing a Republican President was one thing, decreeing who he should be was another. So it was settled that he should be any one of a dozen controllable by "Big Business," old school Republicans or ROOSEVELT.

Two years ago, a small band of cross-toting, shrine-gilding, Teddy-chanting fleshpotters, who believed that the one mortal for President in the nation's crisis was the anointed Theodore, decreed that he should be elected.

Two of their number, also waybilled "Big Business," pledged themselves to pay all freight provided it did not run out of the millions, and thereupon was incubated another come-unto-us-all-ye-etc. organization.

Largely because of the silent but holy work of this splendidly effective Roosevelt organization, a tremendous number of the American people are today getting ready to wing their dearest hope—that to the great Teddy will again be entrusted the helm of the nation. To the silently religious work of this splendidly effective organization can be credited the scientifically smooth shaking of four hundred of the Republican national convention delegates.

Today, on the eve of the Massachusetts preliminary election, the situation is magnificently complete.

There is but one Republican—Theodore Roosevelt—who can be elected over President Wilson. In every section of the country the people, tired of the uncertainty of the times, fearful that the present prosperity of the country will be destroyed at the war's end, and ruefully disgusted at the whipper-a-bit-whistle-a-bit war policy, are enthusiastically of one mind—that this splendid, crimson-blooded American is the man of the hour.

At the opening of the Republican convention, it will be shown by a simple, but vivid movie that, if the Republican convention does not nominate Roosevelt, he will be put before the people by the Progressive convention and that he will be overwhelmingly elected over both Wilson and any old-school Republican who may be the nominee of the Republican convention. Thereupon, "Big Business" will give the word to nominate Roosevelt and thus make certain before election, that the next administration will be satisfactory to "Big Business," thereby advertising to the world in advance of the election the continuation and enlargement of present prosperity.

No intelligent man should argue that the coming Republican convention will meet with the tactics that blackjacked the last one. Conditions today are different from those in 1912:

First—In 1912 it was a mooted question whether Roosevelt could and would split the Republican party. Today it is known he could, would and did.

Second—In 1912 "Big Business" had little to fear from a Roosevelt split. Since then "Big Business" has been skun, shived, brined, crucified and cremated, yet could not be intelligently dreamed out of existence. "Big Business" today is alive and in the saddle as never before—in the saddle to the very guts of the American people.

Third—In 1912 the country was on its way from prosperity to uncertainty. There had been muckraking, agitation, reform, reprisal, retribution. "Big Business" read the handwriting, saw the coming cloud-burst and philosophically mused, "What ter 'ell, it's due, let'er come."

When the Republicans meet in June, 1916, the American people will be field-glassing prosperity bounding from the way-down gulch of before-the-war despair up the mountain of permanent good times, and the Republican bosses will not dare balk the nation's demand for the only man whose nomination will surely bridge present prosperity over the uncertainty between convention time and election day.

My dear Governor, you acknowledge the country's crisis and you say that there are more than a dozen men in sight now to pilot the nation through it, but do you not know that even if this is so, and even if there are a million such fit men, the nomination of any one of them, other than Roosevelt or Roosevelt, would raise hell with prosperity between June's nomination and November's election?

Prosperity is always an easy scate and fly bird. Uncertainty is ever its raw-head-and-bloody-bones scarecrow. But our present peculiar prosperity is such that it cannot possibly stand up to the uncertainty—first, of the nomination of any but one who has been through the Washington mill and—second, the eight months' guessing as to what the new President would do after inauguration.

"Big Business" would know what Root would do if elected, but his nomination would knock prosperity into a topless hat because "Big Business" would know that the chance of Wilson's election over Root would be three to one even without Roosevelt splitting the party.

Hughes' nomination, after he had educated the people to the belief that it is a profanation for him to mix in politics, might strike the country between nomination and election day as—profanation.

No, Governor, there are but two men today whose nomination would hold present prosperity until election and after—Roosevelt and McCall. As soon as Roosevelt was nominated we would all know he would be elected, and when elected lust what he would do for the nation and his party. Not lust what he would do to the nation's and the people's enemies, also as soon as McCall was nominated all would know the future because his twenty years' work in Congress and his doings since he became Governor could leave nothing to uncertainty.

My dear Governor, at the beginning of this campaign you had an impregnable position—you had won a great victory—you were the best and most talked-of Republican in the country. The bosses shook in their shoes for fear that you, with your old-fashioned, dignified statesmanship methods were to be pushed by the people and in spite of the bosses to the very front leadership of the party.

Then the bosses got busy. One morning the country was shocked, yes shocked, to find that you had gone into partnership with some of the professionals who everyone knew had been keeping you busy dodging blacklacks and knockout drops during your entire public career. Everyone understood how it had been worked. Everyone, who knows you, knows your weakness—big-hearted, generous forgiveness of enemies. Everyone knew you had been elbowed and shouldered into a cavity where at the close of Tuesday's balloting your splendid future career might be found buried.

It is a story too well known to all who are posted on Massachusetts politics to make retelling new or interesting.

Your real friends believe that your future hangs on the result of Tuesday's election. They believe that when the ballots are counted, if you top the list, your future will be what they know it should be, but if you tail-end the delegates' ticket, well—your friends will weep for your future.

There are two big, smoothly silent machines at work to deposit you in the political discard. They both have money to paper barns and garages with, and then some. With your rigidly stern principles and ideas of such affairs, there is little you can do to protect yourself against the efforts already under way, but there is one thing you can do that will sweep your eleven-fingered enemies into the cavity they have dug for you.

One bugle blast to the voters of the State on the eve of election to the effect that your mind is absolutely open on Roosevelt and that, if you find at the beginning of the convention that Colonel Roosevelt is the man of the hour, you will do all possible to make him the nominee—that is all that is necessary to put you to the fore of the winning delegates. Now, Governor, why not blow that blast? It is nothing to the voters of Massachusetts whether you or Senator Weeks is first or last when the ballots are counted, but it is everything to you and to your real friends. You know how to blow the blast. It will cost you nothing to send it to every nook and corner of the State because the Press is open to you where it costs your friends thousands to get their thinnest pipe-notes converted into a distress that your big bugle-call can pierce. Why not blow?

TO DEMOCRATS

Tomorrow, the voters of Massachusetts will register their choice for delegates to express in party convention the party's choice for President.

There is small reason for Democrats to vote because there is no dissension in the Democratic party. President Wilson is its unanimous choice.

In the Republican party there is a hot contest—Governor McCall, Senators Lodge and Weeks, and ex-Senator Crane on the one side, and Gardner, Walker, Bird and Washburn upon the other.

With the inside history of the contest exposed, it becomes one that appeals strongly to the sympathy of all red-blooded Democrats.

For years Governor McCall has been at all times the champion of the people. Whenever the lowly in their misery and oppression moaned for help Sam McCall answered; whenever the people's cause cried for aid Sam McCall responded; and when the political thugs sought to drag the people's rights to the laig of class privilege Sam McCall's sword was raised in opposition.

For twenty-five years he toiled for the State, the nation, and the people, and whenever during that time the people sought to reward him for his services the bosses of his party blackjacked his reward to themselves.

At last the people of Massachusetts insisted upon rewarding him, and they made him Governor, and he proceeded to give the State and the people an administration rare even to the old Commonwealth.

This made him the most famous member of his party, and throughout the country arose the cry, "Sam McCall for President!" Then the party bosses who had manhandled him during his entire career, fearing for their own lightning-rodded halos, laid a mean plot to discredit him. By a system of calobery and deception, at which the G. O. P. bosses are blue-ribboners, and with taunts and a bludgeon for party leaders, and under the most sacred promises of fair play, the wand-bearers of the party prevailed upon him to join with Senators Lodge and Weeks and ex-Senator Crane in running as an unpledged delegate-at-large against Gardner, Bird, Walker and Washburn.

Once they had him harnessed they proceeded to set the trap—a simple but contemptibly mean one. Democrats, having no use for their votes, would be appealed to by certain of their party leaders to vote for a certain one of the three candidates on the ticket with Governor McCall. The argument ran—one of the three had already secured a large number of Democratic votes for the purpose of discrediting the one the party leaders were working for. He must protect himself, he had always helped the Democratic bosses, they must help him.

It is rubber-soled gossip that to this tune, piped by certain Democratic shepherds, two of the candidates on the ticket with Governor McCall have each secured a large number of Democratic lambs and goats—20,000 each.

The scheme, if carried to a success, will run these two candidates so far ahead of Governor McCall that he will be discredited—enough probably to end his political career, for his weakness compared with his two associate candidates will be used against him for re-election.

My purpose in this advertisement is to appeal to the manly, square-deal spirit of Democrats, to ask them to have no hand in this dirty work, but instead, to vote for this manly, square-deal champion of the people their aid.

No Democrat should commit the wrong of voting for a Republican, but if any Democrat, because of his party leaders' piping should find himself alone with his conscience in the voting booth and with a comfortable hanker to vote for a Republican delegate, surely he can find no better vent for his hanker than by putting his cross against the name of the one best Republican in the whole country, best measured by his friendliness to the people, by his all-round statesmanship, and his square-deal-ness to all manliness.

For over twenty-five years the leaders of the Democratic parts have plastered me with their regrets at being unable to do anything to repay me for what I have done for them. Every Democrat in Massachusetts knows what I have done. They know I financed John Moran's district attorney ship campaign and his governorship campaign, that I spent many thousands in the Foss congressional and governorship campaigns. It is common knowledge that the Honorable John never vainly asked for manna, and that many other Democrats have had my best efforts, and that they could never, any of them, do me favor in return. Now I ask this of these leaders—see to it that no Democrat exists in any of Tuesday's ballots called McCall knifing, and I ask this of the good old rank and file sports of Democracy, if, for any reason, you must vote for a Republican, put it in for Samuel W. McCall.

TO PROGRESSIVES

Perhaps no man has tried and is trying harder to assist in the election of the Colonel than myself. It is a matter of common knowledge that in the last presidential campaign I personally spent over $100,000 in securing the delegation for Colonel Roosevelt and that at Chicago during convention week I advertised and responded to every call made upon me. It, too, is common knowledge that I asked nothing in return for my work, as I will ask nothing for what I am doing and will do in the present campaign. This being so, I do not hesitate making the following plea to all real Progressives in the State: The Colonel is going to be nominated and elected [illegible] anything short of [illegible] acle" can prevent it. I believe no delegate will be quicker to see the real situation at Chicago, and none will be quicker to vote for the Colonel, and none will exercise greater influence in swinging the convention to the Colonel, than our great Governor. Therefore, why should not every real friend of Roosevelt's in Massachusetts give one of his four votes for delegates-at-large to that grand, independent champion of the people, Governor McCall, and, in doing so, know that in putting Governor McCall at the head of the elected delegates from Massachusetts, he has not only done the right thing, but has landed a good punch on the jaw of those who have persistently given the cruelly insults and mean insolence handed us at the last convention by the G. O. P. thugs who so strong-armedly made a door-mat of our loyalty to the Colonel. Bear in mind, I do not suggest changing all four votes, only one. Also bear in mind that the change of one vote from one of the Colonel's pledged delegates to Governor McCall cannot possibly mar the Colonel's chances.

TO COLORED CITIZENS

You all know me, at least, most of you of New England do. On unlucky days—sickness days, out-of-luck days—days to tell me how you would like to vote for me for something that you might show me, etc. Now here is a chance to do something which will cost you nothing, but which, if done on Tuesday—to put in a vote for Samuel W. McCall, one of the colored race's best friends, for delegate to the Republican National Convention.

It is of the greatest import to Governor McCall that he receives tomorrow the highest possible vote. It is perhaps of more import to him than was the big vote that elected him governor. Therefore, see to it that your vote is cast to him.

TO VOTERS

This advertisement is solely for the purpose of securing votes for our great Governor, Samuel W. McCall, for delegate to the National Republican Convention.

There is a plot under way to so discredit Governor McCall in this peculiar contest as to make it appear in the press and public outside the State that he is not the peer of the strongest statesman in Massachusetts. Of course, he is not only the peer of our other greatest statesmen, but he is the peer of any statesmen living today, and it would be a three curse shame to have him at just this time, when he is high in the nation's eye, made to appear less large than he is, and solely through the machinations of jealous movie statesmen, to have that his fame may speckle their carefully worked-up film. If ever the voters of Massachusetts owed a sterilized duty to anyone of the old Commonwealth's triple headed men, they owe it to Samuel W. McCall to roll up, tomorrow, such a large vote for him that it will wireless to the whole country between them and Convention Day the automatically certified fact that he is not only the biggest statesman in Massachusetts, but next to the great Roosevelt, the greatest in the country.

NOTICE

Neither Governor McCall nor any other knew anything directly or indirectly of this advertisement or its contents until it appeared in the press. I do not know whether Governor McCall or any other citizen of Massachusetts will approve or condemn, wholly or in part, its sentiments, conclusions, or political good form, and it is of no chafing concern to me whether they do or not.

The entire advertisement from idea to signature, from substance to atmosphere is mine, and speaks for itself as to motive and intention.

CHURCHES AND HOMES FIGHT LICENSES

The homes and churches of two residential districts—Orient Heights and Roslindale—are carrying anti-liquor license fights right up to a finish before the Excise Board.

Orient Heights, a beach community, will send a petition signed by 1,000 residents to the Excise Board protesting against a second-class license being granted to J. A. Vesce. There are two wholesale places at the Heights, handy to the Narraw Gauge railroad station. Vesce has one of them. He now seeks a second-class license—to sell beer and light wines—next to his wholesale place.

In Roslindale, J. Patterson & Sons seek a fourth-class or bottled goods license at Washington and Poplar streets. Roslindale has so far kept licenses, wholesale or retail, out of its residential premises.

The Orient Heights battle will develop real artillery work tomorrow, when the Rev. Charles A. Ulrich, pastor of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, will present the joint petitions of the opposition to the Excise Board.

CLERGY CO-OPERATE.

Co-operating with Father Ulrich have been Father Louis Toma of St. Lazarus' Italian Church, the Rev. George S. Fiske of St. Andrew's Methodist and the Rev. Nelson A. Price of the Orient Heights Methodist Episcopal Churches.

Their parishioners signed petitions which, with that of the improvement society members, make up the broadside which Father Ulrich will deliver.

The opposition says that Orient Heights is purely residential, and no place for a retail license of any kind; that hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of property will suffer depreciation, that a retail place so handy to the "Narrow Gauge" station will bring in a drinking element from Winthrop and Revere, which are "dry," and from Lynn, which will be "dry" after May 1.

The Roslindale Community Club, an organization composed of prominent women of Roslindale, has gone on record as bitterly opposed to the issuance of such a license, and the Women's Christian Temperance Union has also taken a very active part in the fight against the proposition.

For the first time in nine years Ward 23 went license by about one hundred votes last November, but the protestants point out that that vote in favor of license came from the Jamaica Plain precincts, and it was that that swung the ward into the license column. They say further that the ward lines change this year and that the ward will cast a no vote through all precincts, save possibly one in the further end of the district.

Mrs. Trethewey, president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, said that the association had sent letters to the Excise Board asking if an application had been made to grant them a hearing that they might enter their protests.

"Children would pass this store, going to the Lawrence street school and the Charles Sumner school. It is dangerous. We want the saloons and bottle goods kept out of the district," she said.

EARTHQUAKE CAUSES BIG HAITI DAMAGE

Santo Domingo, April 24.—Severe earthquake shocks caused heavy damage throughout the island of Haiti last night and early today. Communication with interior points was broken off, and it is feared there has been heavy loss of life. The tremors began before midnight, but the most severe shock occurred early today. Many houses were razed. The government buildings were shaken.

Washington, April 24.—Two earthquake shocks of great intensity, one apparently only 1,600 miles from Washington, were reported by Georgetown University today. The first, according to the record, began at 11:21 last night and continued until 12:07, with its centre 1,600 miles from this city. The second commenced at 3:08 this morning and lasted until 4:12. It was seemingly about 2,400 miles from Washington, and was of such intensity as to swing the needles loose from the recording chart.

Shocks were also recorded at other colleges.

STRIKERS ON GUARD FORM 'HUMAN CHAIN'

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 24.—Numerous clashes occurred today when forty deputies guarding the East Pittsburgh plant of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, where 16,000 men and women are on strike, attempted to disperse great crowds that gathered around the entrances.

The deputies were roughly handled and many times were forced to use their clubs to protect themselves. No serious injuries were reported, however, and no arrests were made.

When the doors to the plant were opened the strikers again linked hands, forming a human chain about the entrances. This chain the deputies once succeeded in breaking, but it was reformed and further attempts to sever it up to the time the doors were closed were futile.

WILSON TREE FOR LINCOLN HIGHWAY

Washington, April 24.—President Wilson will plant a tree on the Lincoln highway when he goes to Princeton, N. J., to vote in the primaries tomorrow. The Daughters of the American Revolution are arranging to mark the route of the Lincoln highway with trees planted by prominent men. President Wilson today consented to plant one at Princeton. Governor Field of New Jersey also plants one there tomorrow.

EGYPTIENNE STRAIGHTS CIGARETTES

Absolutely Pure 100% Turkish Tobacco

Cork Tips 10 Cents for 10 Plain Ends

ALFRED G. VALE CHARLES C. SKINNER JOHN E. WILLIAMSON WILLIAM H. O'BRIEN WILLIAM J. GARVEY

Here is the Blending Board of The American Tobacco Company—the Board which passes on $5,000,000 worth of Turkish Tobacco every year

No other tobacco company in America can have the services of so brilliant an aggregation of experts, gentlemen. The salaries of this Board amount to many thousands of dollars annually—to produce general excellence in the pure Turkish cigarettes made by this Company. Yet, on the enormous output of cigarettes manufactured by The American Tobacco Company, it represents only a fraction of a cent to insure this general excellence.

The personnel of this Board is most interesting. It numbers among its members men whose names have been famous for years in the cigarette industry in America. Its chairman, Mr. W. H. O'Brien, Vice President of The American Tobacco Company, is famous as the producer of every big selling pure Turkish cigarette in America today. Those around him are the men who have made this Company the leader of the world in producing quality in a cigarette. This Board meets twenty-six times a year. Its main work is to see that the standards of the brands are kept right up to top notch. At the same time a sub-committee is conducting experimental work on new blends all the time.

It is a fact most interesting, that just one hundred and twelve blends of tobaccos were produced before the EGYPTIENNE STRAIGHTS blend was decided upon. When one considers that each blend requires one thousand pounds of tobacco, the tobaccos being used in exact proportion from each Turkish province as decided upon by each member of the Board, the enormous initial expenditure will be appreciated—but The American Tobacco Company never does anything by halves.

We present a chart for your inspection which has never been shown to the American public before. It shows the selection of Turkish tobaccos now being used in EGYPTIENNE STRAIGHTS cigarettes. You will notice that five years' tobacco is called upon to furnish the blend. At present tobaccos from the 1910 to the 1914 crop are employed. When the 1910 crop gives out, the 1915 one, which has already been tested for smoking quality, aroma and delicacy, will be used. By this gradual change the blend never varies. When the crop of a certain province is not used it is because it did not come up to expectations for quality and consequently must be eliminated from the EGYPTIENNE STRAIGHTS blend.

Little do you think, when you buy a box, of the untiring effort, energy and brain power that has produced this inimitable cigarette. It almost beggars description to inform the public of their goodness from every standpoint, and of the EGYPTIENNE STRAIGHTS factory where they are made—the factory which amazed M'Cann of the New York Globe, whose ideas on cleanliness in factories are the most drastic in the world.

Remember, we want everyone who can to visit the EGYPTIENNE STRAIGHTS factory, 337-347 West 27th Street, New York City. Your name and address on a postal will bring you the card of admission promptly. Furthermore, we would welcome questions from smokers regarding cigarette manufacturing. The next two advertisements of STRAIGHTS will tell you in general about the factory before we begin telling you about the actual manufacturing of EGYPTIENNE STRAIGHTS CIGARETTES.

TWO MILLS IN OPERATION AT EXPOSITION

Textile mill owners and millionaires, in many cases having traveled thousands of miles, were present at Mechanics Building today, at the opening of the textile exposition which is to feature "Textile Week."

Two complete woolen and cotton mills were in full operation, and were viewed by mill owners and manufacturers from all over the United States, Canada and Europe.

On Wednesday and Thursday the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, one of the largest textile organizations in the United States, will meet at the Copley-Plaza. It will be the 150th meeting of the association.

The Southern New England Textile Club, which includes in its membership the majority of the big textile manufacturers in that section, and a number of other prominent men in the textile industry, will also meet.

One feature of the exhibition is the Jacquard loom that will weave any design or picture in cloth. The big loom is operated much like a piano and every one of the threads in the warp are individually controlled by the Jacquard, which is merely a series of perforations in cardboard.

STOCKS AND INVESTMENTS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were strong in New York at noon and many issues showed large gains. The market had been active all the morning, five hour transactions totalling more than 2,000,000 shares. There was no excitement in that or the second hour, some issues receded from their highest but the average advance remained large. Issues which advanced the most were found among the industrials, coppers and motors.

Gains of 2 points included Anaconda 2¾, Kennecott 2, Smelting, Utah Copper 1¾, Baldwin Locomotive 1¾, Bethlehem Steel 1¾, Crucible 1¾, Great Northern ore 1¾, Republic Steel 1¾, American smelting 1⅝, U. S. Smelting 1⅝, Studebaker 3¼, Mexican Petroleum 3¼, Texas Co. 3, U. S. Steel 1⅝, American Sugar 2, Cuba Cane 2¼, American Can 2¾, Goodrich 1¾, Rubber 1¾, Tobacco 1¾, Marine preferred certificates 1¾, Canadian Pacific 1, New Haven 1, N. Y. Central 1, Northern Pacific ½, Paul 1¾, Union Pacific ½, Reading ½, Atchison ½ and Missouri Pacific ¼.

In Boston at noon stocks were the strongest issues in New York, but they included American zinc 1¾, Butte & Superior 1¾, Copper Range 1¾, Calumet & Arizona 1¾, Hancock 1, Isle Royale 1¾, Mass Gas 1¾, Shattuck 1¾, Michigan ¾, Nipissing 2¾, Old Colony 1¾, Quincy 1¾, Tamarack 1¾, Utah Apex ¾, Utah Metals ¾, Utah Copper 1¾, Utah Consolidated ¾, Victoria ¾, Wolverine 1¾, Boston & Albany 2¾, Boston & Maine ¾, Boston Elevated ¾, Boston & Lowell ¾, Boston & Providence 3¾, Fitchburg preferred 1¾, Maine Central ¾, Northern New Hampshire ¾, Old Dominion 1¾, Pullman 1¾, Reece Button Hole ¾, Swift 1¾, Torrington ¾, Union Pacific ½, United Fruit 1¼, United Shoe ¾ and West Lumber ¾.

OPENED WITH YARNS.

Prices rallied higher at the opening in New York, the majority of issues showing gains. War industrials and motors were the strongest. Copper was more irregular, while rails were dull. Railroads were comparatively inactive but had a steady tone. Trade was in scant supply. Among issues to show the largest openings were Anaconda, Baldwin Locomotive, Bethlehem Steel, Chino, Kennecott, Reliance, American Locomotive, Studebaker, Maxwell, Mexican Petroleum, Industrial Alcohol, U. S. Steel, Crucible Steel, Marine preferred certificates, American Smelting and American Can. Opening gains ranged from fractions to three points, the latter allowance being by Studebaker. The market was lively at the start and continued to be active. It appeared as if a break with Germany had been discounted last week. There was a strong demand for stocks at the lowest reached on Saturday, and enough orders accumulated over Sunday to start buying of magnitude this morning. Covering was on an extensive scale as soon as shorts learned the price movement. Traders believe that this week will be a period of historical importance, but it began with the market stronger technically than it has been for months.

FOREIGN OUTLOOK BETTER!

One rumor which circulated financial circles this morning was that Germany would yield to the United States the matter of warfare question. Nothing was known that gave the report a definite foundation, but it may be that the wish inspired the thought. But hope that the crisis will end in peace was of sentimental value in a way. It is understood that the Mexican situation is as troublesome as ever, and that the possibility of this country being involved in the European war. Uncertainty and fear would result in dominating market factors until the Kaiser's reply to President Wilson's ultimatum has been received and made public.

BOSTON OPENED HIGHER.

At the opening the Boston market was active and prices were higher than at the close on Saturday. Among the strongest issues were Zinc, United Fruit and U. S. Smelting. Business in them was of considerable volume. Several copper were traded in to a considerable extent. The local market reflected the one in New York.

FORD WOULD RUN IF REALLY SOUGHT

New York, April 24.—Henry Ford, in an interview here today, said:

"No man should run for the Presidency or for any other office. When a man runs for an office he usually wants something to be got from it. I hope to know if a particular man is wanted for public office because of his qualifications."

Our soldier boys the Nation's pride
March miles each day with sturdy stride
To cure their calloused, aching feet
All now depend on Cal-o-cide.
Cal-o-cide Gives Instant Relief For Aching, Burning, and Sweaty Feet! Corns, Callouses, and Sore Bunions. It penetrates the pores and removes the cause. Results positively guaranteed. Get a box from any druggist 25c. Remember the name.

ITCHY RASH ON CHEST AND FACE
Later On Shoulders and Back. Burned Like Fire. Had No Rest at Night.
HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT
"I had a rash which began on my chest and face, later going to my shoulders and back. It was very itchy and I had to scratch it which made it burn like fire, and the skin was sore and inflamed. When my clothing would rub against it, it caused itching and burning which was very uncomfortable and I had no rest at night, for after going to bed I would go to sleep for a few moments only to be waked up again.
"I let the rash go for about a week when I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After the first application they seemed to stop the burning and after I used two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and four cakes of Cuticura Soap I was healed." (Signed) Wm. C. Robertson, 85 Mountain Ave., Dorchester, Mass., Oct. 21, 1915.

An Inside Bath Makes You Look and Feel Fresh

Says a glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast keeps illness away.

This excellent, common-sense health measure being adopted by millions.

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, claiming this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Just as soap and hot water cleanse and freshen the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the eliminative organs.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste or have a dull, aching head, sallow complexion, acid stomach; others who are subject to bilious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to demonstrate the value of inside bathing. Those who continue it each morning are assured of pronounced results, both in regard to health and appearance.—Advertisement.

Big Business Makes "Party Issue" to Beat Brandeis

Washington, April 24.—The question of confirming the appointment of Louis D. Brandeis to the United States Supreme Court is still convulsing the Senate Committee on Judiciary.

The sub-committee which heard the opposition to Mr. Brandeis' appointment reported in favor of Mr. Brandeis by a party vote of three to two.

It was a party vote because the opponents of Mr. Brandeis realized, after they began their opposition, that the charges which they were attempting to make against him would not hold water and that reasonable men would not oppose a man of Mr. Brandeis' legal ability and public service on the ground that he was proved unfit by these charges.

No one of the gentlemen in the Senate cares to stand alone upon the proposition that Mr. Brandeis in character, ability and service was not qualified to sit on our highest bench.

OPPONENTS WEAK, MAKE PARTY ISSUE.

The opponents of Mr. Brandeis saw the weakness of their position and immediately resorted to the old device of making it a party issue. This would relieve a lot of gentlemen in the Senate, who are accustomed to taking orders from the special interests and the powerful corporations and who are very glad to do so, from the responsibility of voting against Mr. Brandeis on their individual judgment.

If they do it in party unison, their individual responsibility became less and the challenging of their personal motives would therefore be more difficult.

It is well known that a man will do as a party measure a thing which neither his conscience nor his courage will permit him to do on his individual responsibility. Therefore, the special interests, which are determined to defeat Mr. Brandeis confirmation at any cost, have made it a party issue so far as they can make it one.

GRIEVANCES ARE PERSONAL ONES.

Ex-President Taft and former Attorney-General Wickersham under him were prevailed upon to lead the way in a partisan campaign. Mr. Taft and Mr. Wickersham both had personal grievances against Mr. Brandeis.

The most embarrassing and hurtful blunder in the Taft administration was the Ballinger case, where Secretary Ballinger was accused by Gifford Pinchot, Glavis and other independent, courageous and public-spirited men of using his official position in the national government as a member of the Cabinet to help powerful private syndicates to grab the great, rich, public lands in Alaska.

The public hearings before Congress in proof of these charges against Secretary Ballinger were conducted by Mr. Brandeis. And to the great distress of President Taft, who stood blindly by Ballinger throughout the affair, so much proof was adduced and the country was so aroused against Ballinger that he was forced out of the Cabinet.

HIDE BEHIND PARTY SKIRTS.

Wickersham, the Attorney-General, who approved of Ballinger's conduct, also had the same feeling as Taft against Brandeis' too able and thorough conduct of the hearing against Ballinger.

Under the leadership of Taft and Wickersham it was not difficult to make it a party question, for too many of the Senators were anxious to hide behind the party's skirts.

It may seem to the ordinary citizen that this struggle over one place on the Supreme Court is a most disproportionate effort by so large a number of powerful and busy men. But, in fact, it is not at all an unimportant contest.

Nothing is more important, both to the people at large and to the corporations and special interests, than the control of a place on the United States Supreme Court. It is the most powerful court in the world.

VAST POWERS OF SUPREME COURT.

No other court assumes and exercises the power which is assumed and exercised by our United States Supreme Court. Neither the courts of Great Britain, of France, of Germany, of Austria-Hungary, of Italy, of Russia, nor of any of the great powers assume to nullify a law which is passed by the National Legislature on the ground that it is unconstitutional.

Our forefathers, in writing our Constitution, did not give expressly, and used no language in the Constitution which would could be construed as indicating an intention to give, so extraordinary a power to the United States Supreme Court.

But, under the leadership of a very able and a very strong man, Chief Justice John Marshall, the Supreme Court arrogated to itself that power and, though not abusing nor abusing but by exercising it cautiously and beneficially, the court persuaded the people of the country silently to acquiesce in it.

As the exercise of the power continued through the years the relation in the minds of the court itself that it was a pure assumption gradually died out and with it faded also considerably the fear of prudence and caution with which it was exercised.

BULWARK OF VESTED INTERESTS.

The Supreme Court has been in the years since the Civil War the bulwark of what is called "vested interests." Its power was recognized by the corporations and vested interests long before it was recognized by the people, and for years the railroad lawyers and others, realizing the extraordinary powers of the court, have watched its make-up with the most pains-taking care.

The Judicial Committee of the Senate is an important committee in the minds of the corporation lawyers for the very reason that before the Senate must come also confirmation of appointment by the President to the Supreme Court.

For years no man thought to be independent and progressive and of broad views on our great economic and social problems has been allowed to take a place on the Supreme Bench. Some times men who have been conceded "safe and sane" before their appointment have changed their point of view after they took their places on the bench and have been independent and patriotic judges.

SPECIAL INTERESTS WATCH SELECTION.

But, in the main, the railroads and the great special interests generally have successfully watched over the selection of the judges to our Supreme Court.

Right well their vigilance has served them.

Consider what one bad judge on the Supreme Court can do to the injury of the people of the United States. There was the income tax decision. For one hundred years the United States government had assumed the right to levy an income tax. Without an income tax we might not have won the Civil War.

After the Civil War and under the cover of issues which grow out of the slavery question, high finance began its wild career in this country. It assumed control of the national government, of our State Legislatures, our judges, our prosecuting officers and of all our public servants.

Under its control the national government did not attempt to levy any income tax upon the well-to-do classes of the country, although it is known by all economists to be the one fair tax which human ingenuity has yet devised—the one tax which could be easily be shifted upon the poor, a tax which the progressive countries of Europe were already levying.

NULLIFIED THE INCOME TAX.

Finally, however, there came a Congress in 1832 which had the courage to levy an income tax. The law was challenged in the Supreme Court by the millionaire class as unconstitutional and one judge, holding the balance of power and changing his opinion over night, nullified the act of Congress, the act of the representatives of the people of the United States, and destroyed a law which would have relieved the people of the United States of the burden of millions of millions of dollars in taxation every year.

It took twenty long years to pass a constitutional amendment which took away from the Supreme Court the power to destroy another income tax law. In the meantime the people of the United States were compelled unjustly to bear the burden of hundreds of millions of taxation because one judge on the Supreme Court was a bad judge.

MR. BRANDEIS IS NOT THEIR KIND.

Mr. Brandeis is not their kind of man. He does not have their point of view. He does not think that everything they want is right and that everything which will relieve the condition of the poor and of the average man is wrong.

They know his public record. They know that it spells competency, courage and patriotism of the highest order. They understand how efficiently in the last twenty years he has fought the cause of the average man against the selfishness and the aggression of the highly-organized few.

The special interests local to New England reported to the national special interests Mr. Brandeis' local activities. They told how he had led the contest to prevent the Boston Elevated from getting control of our subways, the great underground highways of the metropolitan district.

HIS BOLT FROM UNITED SHOE.

They told how successful that contest had been and how efficient Mr. Brandeis' leadership was. They told how Mr. Brandeis had organized an association to reduce the cost of life insurance in Massachusetts and how successful he had done it.

They told how he refused to serve any longer as a lawyer and director of the United Shoe Machinery Company when he found that the policy of that company was, in his opinion, in violation of the law and against the public interest.

They showed how fanatical he was in these matters, as evidenced by his refusal to take a fee, though he acted as counsel for those who were fighting in the public interest.

They told how his activities brought about a reduction in the price of gas in Boston, by which the people of the city saved a few years saved more than $6,000,000.

Then they told how efficiently and successfully he had fought against the attempt of the New Haven Railroad to monopolize transportation and all public utility activities in New England, and how prophetically he warned the people of New England against the promises of the railroad representatives and predicted the financial disaster which actually did follow the culmination of the railroad's scheme of aggrandizement, involving the wreck of the two great New England railroads and the loss of millions to New England investors.

ATTORNEY FOR THE PEOPLE.

Mr. Brandeis' activities as "attorney for the people" were well known at Washington and needed no local report. They knew of his service as counsel for the wage-earners of Oregon in the successful attempt to have their hours of labor cut down to ten hours in the day.

The whole country knew of the Ballinger case and of Mr. Brandeis' service in the reorganization of the National Life Insurance Company.

All these activities showed the special interests that Mr. Brandeis was not only a man of a dangerous point of view, of a dangerous idea of his public duty, but also of a very dangerous ability. It was clear to them that they must spare no effort to keep such a man out of a place so powerful.

This, therefore, is the reason why such extraordinary efforts are being made to prevent the confirmation of Louis D. Brandeis to the Supreme Bench.

Of course, such collateral arguments that can be made against him are being employed. The fact that he is a Jew is being quietly circulated to his disadvantage.

INTERESTS HOLD UP THE REPORT.

The interests are holding up the report of the committee presumably in order to have more time to work upon the members of the Senate.

Senator Shields of Tennessee is the man they are working on. Though he is a Democrat, they have great hope of him because they believe that his sponsorship of the Shields water power bill indicates that he is an "interest" man. Whether that is true remains to be seen.

Many progressives despaired of Senator Shields when they realized he was the author of the Shields water power bill. But when it is reported to the Senate it is confidently believed that the progressive Republican will greatly outnumber the reactionary Democrats who caution Senator Shields with the corporations on all questions and so, therefore, may vote against Mr. Brandeis.

The committee may report the question to the full Senate today.

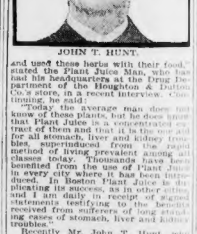
THE TESTIMONIAL OF A POLICEMAN

Squantum St. Resident Relates How Plant Juice Cured Him of Indigestion.

"In olden days people were more careful of their digestive organs than now, and in this way they kept close to Nature, learned the value of many of Nature's medicinal plants and herbs.



JOHN T. HUNT.

"Today the average man does not know of these plants, but he does know that Plant Juice is a concentrated extract of them and that it is the cure for all stomach, liver and kidney troubles, superinduced from the many forms of living prevalent among all classes today. Thousands have already benefited from the use of Plant Juice in every city where it has been introduced. In Boston Plant Juice is displeasing its success, as in other cities, and I am daily in receipt of signed testimonials testifying to the benefit received from sufferers of long standing cases of stomach, liver and kidney trouble."

Recently Mr. John T. Hunt, who resides at No. 191 Squantum street, Atlantic, Mass., a suburb of Boston, who is one of the best known and most popular men on the police force, said:

"For three years I had suffered with indigestion and constipation. I could hardly keep anything on my stomach as it would cause me such distress and I was all bloated with gas which pressed on my heart and gave me palpitation. I used everything I heard of in the hope of getting relief, as I was getting all run down from loss of sleep and could only sleep for two hours at a time and would be awake all the rest of the night. My liver and kidneys became affected and I had a lump in the pit of my stomach that used to disgust me to try Plant Juice, as it had cured him, so I got a bottle and am glad to state, for the benefit of other fellow sufferers, that it has entirely cured me. I can eat anything I want, sleep well and have no more aches or pains. I certainly can recommend Plant Juice."

The Plant Juice Man is at the Drug Department of the Houghton & Dutton Co.'s store, where he is daily meeting the local public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy.—Advertisement.

EMPLOYMENT MEN TO MEET MAY 10

The reduction of excessive hiring and discharges of employes will be one of the principal topics to be discussed at the first annual conference of employment managers which is to be held in Boston, Wednesday, May 10, under the auspices of the Employment Managers' Association, of which Charles M. Lawrence is president; E. O'Callaghan, treasurer, and Ralph G. Wales, secretary.

There will be one hundred employment managers and directors of personnel in large New England industries and business houses are expected to be present, together with visitors from all the large cities of the country.

The conference, which is to be held on May 10, is in charge of the following committees:

H. L. Gardner of Cheney Bros., chairman; J. Reilly of Dennison Manufacturing Company, Carlton T. Bingham of Bird & Son, Meyer Rosenthal of the Vocation Bureau, Frank W. Wood of W. F. Schrafft & Sons; J. M. Larkin of the Fore River Shipbuilding Co.

First on the program will be a lunch at the City Club, where all sessions of the conference will be held. Topics to be discussed and the chairmen of the subsequent sessions are: "Sources of Supply and Means of Getting in Touch with Them," H. D. Hall, U. S. Cartridge Co., Lowell, Mass.

"Selection and Examination of Employees," Carl C. Hewitt, W. F. Schrafft & Sons Co.

"Training, Promotion, Transfer and Discharge," H. F. Croasdale, Gray & Davis Co.

"Records and Filing System for Employment Department," W. C. Swallow, American Mfg. Co.

"Co-operation," with president William Breed, Jr., of the Employment Managers' Association, and Dr. Frederick J. Allen, president Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation, "Improving the Efficiency and Quality of the Personnel."

"Housing, Transfer Department," Miss Ethel Cheney, Cheney Bros., the Employment Department.

"Methods of Reducing the Labor Turnover," Miss Leonora Cheney, Cheney Bros., the Employment Department.

AUNT OF "BABY BROWN" HAS MEASLES

Lowell, L. I., April 24.—The most prominent woman in Newport for the reunion of "baby week" at the Rogers High School today is Mrs. Harriet Brown, aunt promoter of the baby that sent in the $10,000,000 one "Baby Brown." Mrs. Brown is quarantined in a dark room in her villa with a child's disease—the measles.

POLICEMAN HIT BY TAXI IN NEWTON

Lieutenant Robert F. Harrison, for thirty-five years attached to the Newton police and the oldest man in the department in point of service, was badly injured and will, when he was able to be taken to his home, be driven by a taxicab in which he has been a car in front of police headquarters in West Newton. He will be laid up probably for a couple of weeks.

Weather Has Hurt Game Slim Crowds the Order

By HERMAN NICKERSON.

RAIN has played a prominent part in the season for baseball so far, and this with the almost uniform cold weather will have much to do in causing the club owners to consider the question of a later opening in 1917. Looking some distance ahead, yet this talk is heard that the seasons are changing and that October is what September used to be. Surely last October never furnished anything as disagreeable as the present month has turned out in all the eastern cities.

While there is small chance that the schedule will be changed to push the games back further into October, still there is good cause for consideration of such a move. The clubs so far have not done anything to speak of in the way of business in the East. About the only club to make them in on cold raw days was the Cleveland club, and that organization had the city all worked up over the purchase of Tris Speaker.

POOR CROWDS.

The World's Champions had one good crowd on the afternoon of April 19. That was a mild day. All the other home dates, no matter whether certainly the Braves have not been favored, although their opening day was about as warm as any this Spring. With big parks expensive in their conduct, a high salary list of players and expenses on the road amounting to a small fortune, those who own ball clubs are apt to study weather conditions closely. With only seventy-seven home dates to get the money, the clubs desire to get it when the getting is good.

Short training trips, a season that opens later and continues further into October, mean that the number of contracts for a single season are a few of the things being thought today by those who have their money invested in baseball.

There was a time when double-headers paid. For a few years the two-for-one variety of baseball has not made up for the loss of a scheduled game. There is more money in playing a game in the order under ordinary conditions than there is in doubling it up later on. This season has piled up many double-headers in the short time it has been running, so that if there is a chance to play the Braves and Dodgers will get busy. That chance is exceedingly slim.

GOOD NEWS FOR BRAVES.

Two things have developed which form good news for the Braves. One is that Sherwood Magee's wrist is not so badly injured as at first estimated and after a return of his regular style it did his batting will help a lot at a time when the team leaves are in for a slump. They have been unable to get the clouts when they would count. In the two games played at home ten men were left on bases in the first and eight in the second. Magee is fielding in a manner which recalls his work of ten years ago and he can throw with the same strength and accuracy. In other words it looks like a big season for this popular player.

The other bit of news comes from the Miracle Man direct. The other day I called Manager Stallings attention to certain stories which had been circulated about Bill James' condition this Spring, among them being the report that Bill had not developed anything this Spring.

"That is not so," said Manager Stallings. "James will pitch ball. He is in good condition and has all the speed he ever had, and he can knock a catcher down with it."

PITCHING STAFF STRONG.

That being the case, the pitching staff of the Braves looms that much better at least and the fans are now waiting to see the big Californian sent out to the slab.

George Tyler has not been started in a league game this season, being groomed for a chance when the weather is right.

BIG LEAGUERS TO ASSIST AMATEURS

Indianapolis, Ind., April 24.—Tom O. Jones, secretary of the National Amateur Baseball Association of America, tonight announced the appointment of an advisory council to the president of the organization, Ralston Goss, of this city.

The council is composed of fifteen and includes, in addition to Chairman E. C. Patterson, a millionaire sportsman of Chicago and founder of the association, B. B. Johnson, president of the American League; Ed. Barrow, president of the International League; Ty Cobb, of the Detroit Tigers; Joe Jackson, president of the Baseball Writers' Association, and George Huff, director of athletics at the University of Illinois.

RED SOX IN MACK FINAL

Leonard or Shore Down to Oppose Crowell and Sheehan—Bill's Outfield Crippled.

PHILADELPHIA, April 24—Weather permitting, Bill Carrigan's Red Sox wind up their nine-day successful stay here today. The Champions won the first clash in the series, but came to grief Friday and Saturday, so an even split is the best they can accomplish.

Connie Mack's Kid team had dropped six decisions in a row up to being bracketed in the second game in the series. Rookie Myers looked mighty good Friday, and Nabors, another juvenile, came back with another classy performance.

The indications are that Mack will send another brother today, either Cornell or Sheehan being favored to work. Leonard or Shore will probably mount the hillock for the Red Sox.

Winning their first four games, the Champions have dropped four out of their last six, and must lift up a speedier clip this week in order to escape landing in the second division, after today's contest here comes four battles with the unspoiled Yanks in New York and three tilts with the Nationals in Washington before the Boston boys return to Fenway Park, May 4.

Judged on their form here, Shore and Foster, two of Carrigan's stub pellaneers, need some warm weather before they will get back on their 1915 strides. Carrigan stated to the SHERMAN'S correspondent this morning that both pitchers looked good in their first starts in Boston, but last week's miserable weather "tied up" the pair, which accounts for the bad games they hurled here.

More trouble for Carrigan is the condition of his outfield. Only Hooper and Shorten are sound. Lewis is working with a bum thumb, and it is only because The class is short handed that old reliable Duffy is on duty.

Walker was left behind in Boston when the Red Sox came to Philadelphia. The ex-Brownie is suffering with a cold and sore underpinning, but is looked for when the squad reaches New York.

Henriksen filled his hold in Saturday's matinee and had to retire to the sidelines. It is extremely doubtful if Olaf will be able to perform again until the club reaches Washington next Saturday.

The Champs spent Sunday at Newark. The playing field was quite deep in mud and the stands were sparsely filled; in fact, the house barely totaled 600—people, no dollars. McHale worked the six innings the contest lasted, and won over, 4-0. Only one hit did Mack permit.

As Henriksen played his injury Saturday is shown not to have amounted to much. Olaf, Hobby and Shorten each poled out two singles, while Hooper got one and his was a triple. McNally subbed for Gardner and did good all-round work.

HARRIMAN TO LOSE SEAT IN YALE BOAT

New Haven, Ct., April 24.—Coach Nickalls is confident Yale has two of the most powerful eights in its history and is not counting upon making many shifts following Saturday's defeat by Penn. However, Harriman and MacNaughton will probably be relegated to the second boat.

SIDELIGHTS

BY HERMAN NICKERSON

THREE days of rest should make a difference in the pitching staff of the Giants. Rudolph and Hughes will be ready when the Giants get here.

* * *

CONSIDERABLE interest will be attached to the appearance of the New York team. So much has been written about Benny Kauff that the fans in Boston are anxious to see this youth in action. He is no stranger to Manager Stallings, who chased him out of the game at the Polo Grounds when New York tried to slip him into a lineup one day last Summer.

* * *

The World's Champions are having a hard luck with their pitchers, two of the best men on the staff being for the right. This, however, is a good thing, for it will make the Carrigan boys go after the games from now on with more energy and less confidence. An overdose of confidence is the worst thing in the game. The champs could clean up, did after them!

* * *

ROM now on look for the list of men sent to the minors. Major league club managers should know by this time whom they care to part with. The difficulty is in finding suitable berths for the men.

* * *

RED MITCHELL and "BIP" Sweeney are getting their batting in pretty good shape on their Spring trip. Rain prevented Harvard from playing Saturday, but Boston College slipped one over in fine style.

* * *

OW that Maranville and Gilson have become good friends it would be rather rubbing it in to give them suspension. Except insofar as their "scrap" delayed a game and caused a disturbance, there was nothing to call for a layoff at their own expense. Perhaps the president is relenting and wishes a little more life in the games, which so far have been very listless.

HEN Sherwood Magee gets back in the game, hitting as he was, the Braves should get started. Only is the outfield do they look better than last season.

FRENCH CUEIST IS DEAD.

New York, April 24.—Firmin Casseau, the noted French billiardist, died yesterday in a private sanitarium, following an operation Saturday.

Football Plea Issued by Harvard

Interest in football at Harvard must surely be lagging. Not in years has it been necessary for the captain of the eleven to issue a special appeal for candidates to report at Spring practice. Today Captain Henry H. Dadmun and his manager, Norman L. Burbidge, sent an appeal broadcast to those who aspire for positions on the eleven next Fall.

At the meeting of the football men held on April 5 there was a small attendance and this lack of interest is what prompted Captain Dadmun to send out his appeal today, the very day on which Spring practice is scheduled to open. The appeal follows:

The small attendance at our mass meeting on April 5 shows an unusual lack of interest in football over the time of the year. Although Spring practice is unnecessarily important, upon its result in large measure the success of next year. If we are to duplicate the work of last season it is essential that every man who is able to do so come out for practice today.

MIDDLESEX EIGHT DEFEATS CHOATE

Middlesex School of Concord won the first morning schoolboy race that has been rowed in this vicinity in years today, when they defeated the Choate school of Wallingford, Conn., by four and a half lengths in a half mile race. Middlesex went into the lead at the start and remained there throughout.

The race was rowed during a light drizzle and into a strong headwind which bothered the oarsmen not a little bit. Choate school outweighed the local boys almost ten pounds to the oar, the Connecticut lads weighing 159 pounds as against 149 for Middlesex. Last year Choate school won by less than a foot.

The lineup: Middlesex—Peale, bow; Keays, three; Haggemann, two; Mellen, stroke; Pierson, coxwain. Choate—Brown, bow; Welch, three; Faye, two; Munson, stroke; Johnson, coxswain. Time of race 3:02 1-5.

HARTE IS HITTING NABOB

Harvard's Reliable Catcher Boss Bingler on Southern Trip—Nine Weak on Third Bag.

WITH a record of three victories, one defeat and a tie game for their Southern trip, the Harvard ball players are back in Cambridge today and expect to do a little tipping around Soldiers Field this afternoon, providing the weather permits.

The Crimson defeated West Point, Annapolis and Johns Hopkins; lost a free hitting game to Catholic University, and tied with Virginia. The contest Saturday with Columbia was postponed because of the inclement weather.

Hitting honors on the trip go to "Dick" Harte, who batted for about .500, gathering in eight safe hits. Frank Collego, the centre fielder, who topped the swat order after "Cy" Wyche broke his ankle in the Annapolis game, also batted at a lively clip, pulling seven safe wallops.

George Abbot hit better than usual, while "Mickey" Reed only has one hit to show for five games.

Coolidge and Knowles are pretty sure of their places in the outfield, while George Percy will be given a thorough tryout for the remaining garden post. As hitters are what Coach Mitchell wants to round up, Eddie Mahan may later alternate between the slab and the outfield.

Captain Nash at first base, Abbot at second and Reed at shortstop are fixtures, although the latter may be pushed hard by some infielder who can hit.

Third base is the problem position, with Fripp, Murray and Beal in the running for the final assignment. All three men have been lamentably weak in their hitting and have also fielded their positions weakly. Coach Mitchell may be forced to experiment with his forces to solve the problem and may try Knowles or Percy at the bag.

WHY THIS GROWTH?

THE increase in the sale of FENWAY products during the year just passed was greater than that of any other line of malt beverages made and sold in New England.

In the case of the Fenway increase there need be no far hunt for the reason.

The quality of Fenway brews tells the whole story. They are the only malt beverages brewed in New England or coming from the West made exclusively from CHOICE MALT and with SAAZER KREIS HOPS, and always Brewery Bottled.

This combination of world's best materials and guaranteed sanitary bottling leaves no doubt of the superiority of Fenway over all other beers.

Harvard Crew Shifts Only Lund to Hold Seat

ROWING shuffle is due at Harvard this afternoon when the three varsity crews put forth from the Newell boathouse on the first day's practice since the regatta with Princeton last week, and the initial session of preparation for the races with Cornell, less than a month away.

The varsity eight, composed largely of veterans, lost a close race to Princeton, a row during which the Tigers put forth every ounce of courage and strength which they possessed; where each man pulled to exhaustion, some of them crumpling after the home mark had been passed. The Tigers did not row the pretty stroke that Harvard did, but they rowed to win, and they won.

The Crimson boat rowed as if the craft was out for an everyday spin. The men did not put that "do or die" spirit into their strokes, but finished the race with heads up. Former Coach Jim Wray might have excused the showing of the eight by declaring it was not a racing eight. If form counted, instead of racing ability, Harvard would have won hands down.

Charley Lund's stroking of the crew has been the subject of much criticism, but he probably was not rowing on his own initiative, but on orders from the coaches. At any rate, when Coaches Herrick and Haines seat their varsity eight this afternoon, Lund will probably be the only member of the crew, aside from coxswain Kreger, to row in the position he occupied in the Princeton race.

POTTER TO BE DROPPED.

Two members of the eight expected to be dropped to the second crew are Potter, bow, and Ken Parson, the big footballer. Potter rowed on the second eight last Spring, but Parson has been a regular for two years and one of the most consistent men in the varsity shell.

Captain Morgan has been rowing at No. 6, a position he is unsuited for, because of his short stature, and for this reason will be sent to No. 2, replacing Parson. "Mose" Taylor, who rowed the Princeton race suffering with an infected hand, will be moved from No. 4 to No. 6, while Cabot will advance from No. 3 to how.

Still another shift will station Ted Stebbins at No. 2 instead of No. 4, where "Stormy Jim" Talcott will row, coming down from No. 7.

The two new comers in the shell will probably be Ernie Souers, who will be placed at No. 4, being advanced from the third crew, and Quimby, the Springfield youth, recently removed from probation, who will row at No. 7.

MEDDLER, NOTED AS RACING SIRE, DEAD

Meddler, Clarence H. Mackay's great racing stallion, died on Friday last at the American sportsman's stud in Normandy, according to word received today. He was 26 years old.

In 1892 Meddler first attracted attention by winning the Dewhurst Plate. He was entered in the Derby in 1892, but was unable to start because of the death of G. Abington Baird, who bred the great horse. Meddler was then put on the market and was purchased at auction in England by W. H. Forbes of Boston for $72,500. He was placed in the Forbes Nepenset stud. Upon the death of his owner, he was taken to New York, and under the hammer went to the late William C. Whitney for $49,000. Sold again at auction, Meddler brought $51,000, Mattie Corbett being the purchaser at a sale in Madison Square Garden.

From 1904 to 1906 inclusive Meddler won more than $500,000. In 1904 his winnings were $220,600; 1905, $132,700, and 1906, $151,242. The get of Meddler from 1897 to 1914 inclusive, have won in the United States 584 races, valued at $932,561.

BRITTON ON WITH LEWIS

Booked for Derby Route of 20 Rounds at New Orleans Tonight; Title Up for Settlement.

NEW ORLEANS, April 24.—Old Doctor Difference of Opinion is administering a lot of dope, pro and con, on tonight's welterweight championship battle between Ted (Kid) Lewis of England, holder of the title, and Jack Britton of New York.

His diagnosis of the welterweight's case will furnish many contradictions; in fact, one of two have already been discovered.

We have been told, on one hand, that Jack Britton figures to win, because he is an old-timer and knows too much for the Englishman.

And we have been told, on the other hand, that Ted Lewis should be the favorite because he is young and fresh and is improving all the time.

Now to facts about age and experience.

Britton soon will be thirty years old. He has been boxing since 1910, or eleven years.

Lewis is not quite twenty-one years old. He has been boxing since 1910, or about ten years.

But what have they done in the five bouts in which they were opponents since Lewis came to this country? That's what the confused fan will want to know most of all.

Well, three bouts were for 10 rounds without a decision, and two went 12 rounds, the Boston limit, Lewis winning both on points.

However, since then, Britton outpointed Lewis in 10 rounds in Buffalo and Brooklyn.

Holy Cross Has Good Looking Track Team

Worcester, April 24. — Coach Burt Sullivan and Captain Jim Higgins of the Holy Cross track team are working a squad of over thirty candidates daily in preparation for the coming outdoor meets and the New England Intercollegiates, May 19-20.

Holy Cross will be very strong in the sprints, as Andy Kelly, national indoor champion, should have everything his own way, judging from what he has shown indoors. Kelly can a close second to Irving Howe of Colby, in both contests last year at the New Englands, and with Howe out of college, Kelly should win both events. Foley, Cash and Boland are fast men and have made good time over the century and furlong distance.

BOXING BRIEFS AND GOSSIP

IF by any hook or crook, Joe Eagan, the Dorchester welterweight, takes the measure of Mike O'Dowd, the St. Paul slugger, a bout big money in the ringing number at the Arena tomorrow night, he has got to be considered as good as they come in that class, and that though it was only a few months ago when he was mostly considered a semi-final workman.

THE St. Paul boy came East a few weeks ago. He has been training at Pat Hawkins' roadhouse, on New York's outskirts, and of course it is stated he is cheery rips for his fares with Eagan. O'Dowd was due in Boston early today in company with Foley, Cash and Boland are fast men and have made good time over the century and furlong distance.

THAT Eagan has come a-hustling up the line, thanks to minding his p's and q's and being well handled by Eddie Mack, was proven by his recent slashing scrap with Mike Glover at the Rink.

EAGAN was generally picked to be a set-up for O'Dowd. He wasn't anything of the kind, far be it. Joe looked every bit as good as the fashionable South Ender during boy during the life of their twelve-rounder.

DOPED on that debt, Eagan has been hustled well on the fore among the scrappy 135-146 pounders. In O'Dowd he is meeting a boy who is reported to be a tough, rugged workman, still. Mack has his charge ready and is confident the home starter is going to be bracketed.

EVER HAMMER GOES ON WITH KING WELSH

Milwaukee, April 24.—Ever Hammer, the hard-hitting Chicago lightweight and generally rated the best young 135-pounder in the country, meets Freddie Welsh, the champion, in a ten-round bout here tonight. Hammer plays going four jobs in the ring.

The Struggles of a Wife

Myra Receives Praise, but Is Troubled by a New Suspicion

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER XXIV.

Copyright, 1910, Star Company.

As Horace Webb saw his wife's face in the restaurant window above him, he started violently and hesitated. Then, at a word from the girl who was with him, he stood to one side to let her pass out, and followed her, the door slamming behind him.

"When will you have it ready?"

The question was Perry Martin's and Myra was aware that he was watching her with a perplexed expression. Evidently he had spoken before and she had not heeded him.

"I—I—beg your pardon!" she exclaimed in confusion, her cheeks burning as she appreciated that he had caught her off her guard. "I was—I was—looking at some people down there"—with a nod toward the street. "It is actually all that some of them can do to walk against the wind. But I must have seemed very inattentive to what you were saying. Pray excuse me! What did you ask me?"

Her confused manner did not escape her companion. What could have caused it? he wondered.

"My question," he said gravely, "was as to when you think you can let us have that story?"

"Within a week or ten days," she replied.

"You will not offer it to anyone else first, will you?" he demanded bluntly.

"Of course I won't!" she exclaimed.

A LOT OF WILD THOUGHTS

Did he fancy that she could be capable of such double dealing? He had behaved as if he were a gentleman and as if he understood that she belonged to his class—and yet he could ask her a question that seemed almost a reflection upon her sense of honor.

And all at once she remembered that, although this man and she had been chatting here together at a luncheon at which she was his guest, they had met for but one purpose—that of business.

Myra Webb, the woman, was nothing to him. Myra Webb, the writer, was worth his attention until he had made sure that she would serve his purpose.

She glanced at her watch and rose. "It is getting late," she remarked. "I must be going."

All her enthusiasm had died out, killed for the moment by her companion's change of manner and by the sight of her husband with a woman whom she had never seen before. Who was she?

She turned this speculation from her until she could be alone. She dared not dwell just yet on the subject of Horace. It was too vitally important for her to contemplate it now.

"I thought," Perry Martin was saying, still in a practical, businesslike way, "that you might be hesitating to pronounce on the story until you were quite sure about the price we would pay. We will, of course, give what we gave for 'Bitter Waters'—if that is entirely satisfactory."

In the brief time that had passed since the appreciation had come to her that she was, after all, only a writer to this editor, she had regained her need to meet his

HE SAYS "GOOD-BYE."

"We can settle that later, can't we?" she ventured. "I do not know yet how long the story may be, you do not know whether it will suit you or not."

"As to that last suggestion," he replied, "I am pretty sure that we may eliminate any possibility of its not suiting us—it, as I said a while ago, you write it as excellently as you told it to me. But—you are right—we can wait."

He helped her put on her coat and escorted her as far as the foot of the uptown elevated railroad steps.

Here he raised his hat and bade her good afternoon.

"It has been pleasant lunching with you," he said politely. "I hope that in the future we may have many conferences about your stories."

"Thank you," she said. But he hardly heard her, for the wind and the roar of the approaching train above them drowned her voice. He saw, however, the conventional smile, and marvelled that all the spontaneity and sparkle seemed to have gone from this woman since she finished unloading her brain child. Probably she had the artistic temperament, he reflected with a half smile as he turned his steps toward his office.

Seated in the uptown train Myra tried to fix her thoughts on what had happened. She strove to bring back the thrill that she had felt when Martin had praised the plot of her story.

"If you write it as you have told it"—she whispered the words to herself, but the emotion they had aroused did not return. She did not even recall how the speaker had looked when he uttered them.

For uppermost in her mind was the recollection of the expression of surprise in her husband's eyes as they met hers and the presence of the slender figure at his side.

Taking Revenge on Widows

Ill-Feeling Carried Beyond the Grave.

Now and again we hear of hardhearted husbands making things as difficult as possible for the widows they leave behind them.

Even the famous have had a dig at their wives, as witness the great Duke of Marlborough, who left his duchess "£50,000 wherewith to spoil Blenheim in her own way, and $75,000 to keep clean and go to law with."

The Earl of Stafford, one of Marlborough's contemporaries, wrote in his will: "I give to the worst of women, who is guilty of all the ills, the daughter of Mr. Gramont, whom I have unfortunately married, five-and-forty brass halfpence, which will buy her a pullet for her supper, a greater sum than her father can often make."

Many wives have been cut off with the proverbial shilling, and one husband went a little further by stating that any expense his spouse was put to in connection with the will should be paid by herself, and not the estate. But the limit was surely reached by the "loving" English bosom who directed that his wife should have but one farthing, which was to be sent to her in an unstamped envelope, the reason being that she had called him an old pig and other names.

The man who left his widow penniless unless she married again within five years must have been another to regard his wife as a "vinegar cruet," for he candidly explained that he wanted sons one else to find out how hard she was to live with.

A Norwich man left good provisions for his widow, provided on every anniversary of his death she walked bareheaded to the market place, where, holding a lighted candle, she confessed that her cruel conduct had shortened his life. In default, she was to receive a mere $100 a year.

Another man left a snug little sum of money to a man who had run off with testator's wife some years previously, as he never "forgot a favor."

STOMACH UPSET?

Get at the Real Cause — Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—sluggish liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away goes indigestion and stomach trouble.

If you have a bad taste in your mouth, tongue coated, appetite poor, lazy, dizzy feeling, no ambition or energy, troubled with undigested food, you should take Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief, so you can eat what you like. At 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

Tabloid Tales

I suppose, Mother Mine, that now that Miss Woman has a new dress that is becoming, she will be satisfied.

No!, My Child, till the man she likes the best and the woman she likes the least have seen her wear it.

What, Mother Mine, does it mean when it is said a woman is "prostrated with grief"?

It means, My Child, that she is wealthy and has time to make much of her sorrows. The woman of poverty, My Dear Child, has so much work to do, and so many serious situations awaiting her every hour of the day, that she never has time for the luxury of taking a grief to bed in the day time and blubbering over it.

What, Mother, is a lullaby?

It is a song, My Child, which women sing in public and which is supposed to be written for putting babies to sleep, but which wakens every baby in the block whenever it is sung.

The Sweet Sixteen Club

Beatrice Fairfax Tells Girls How to Form One

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A NUMBER of my girl readers and their mothers—and one father — have responded to my question, "Where is sweet sixteen?" I am glad to have so much evidence that, though fairly well hidden away, she is still with us. Several of the girls have asked for suggestions as to how to start a Sweet Sixteen Club.

"I am a high school girl, in my sixteenth year, and mother thinks it would be nice for me to start a Sweet Sixteen Club if you would advise us how to run it," writes Martha H. "I will be very much pleased if you will give a few suggestions as to how you would have us dress and wear our hair, etc."

I hope that she and all the other girls who wrote for suggestions about Sweet Sixteen Clubs will really keep their interest in the idea and form these clubs. It ought to be a very simple matter.

First of all, why doesn't the sixteen-year-old girl set her elders the example of modesty in dressing? If she just combines good sense and good taste and modesty, she will hardly need me to suggest that low-cut blouses and very sheer material and skirts scant where they ought to be full and absurdly short (if she has the figure of a woman even when she is a little girl), are particularly out of keeping with "sweet sixteen."

One is grown up so very long and a little girl for such a short time that the folly of piling youth's hair on top of its head and having it dressed to ape age is a very pathetic one, indeed.

Then give your skin a chance, girls. Don't cover it with cosmetics and clog up the pores, which fairly long to drink in sunshine and fresh air. Don't pile your hair on top of your head, but leave it down in a braid or bob to do its healthy growing in air and sunlight. Be just as natural as ever you can.

It's a good habit to get into, and you will look much prettier than when you are an absurd little painted imitation of a rather ordinary type of woman.

So much for the appearance of the girl who is sweet sixteen and proud to show it.

Now about a club. At your age I belonged to two. One was called the Junior Musicale. There were sixteen girls in it, and we met at one another's houses on Saturday afternoons. None of us were "artistes," but each one of us could play a little or sing a bit, or perhaps manage a tune on the banjo or mandolin.

We studied the lives of the composers and taught ourselves to appreciate good music. And on holidays we used to go to hospitals and give entertainments for sick children. At our home parties we had simple refreshments, and when we went out we gave simple entertainments.

Simplicity was our keynote, and we learned a great deal and had a very happy time, too. Studying music earnestly didn't leave us much time for running after boys or worrying about dresses and society.

The other club to which I belonged at sixteen was a Sunday Afternoon Walking Club. There were only six of us, and each one in turn acted as hostess, planning a five-mile walk and bringing her five friends home for a simple tea at 6 o'clock.

A cooking club seems to me a particularly worthy institution for Sweet Sixteen to consider. A reading club with a mapped out course of classical study, or a sewing club either for charity or with a charitable intent to learn mending and to take some of the burden off mother's shoulders would do splendidly, too.

It would be very easy for the schoolgirl of sixteen to interest some kindly teacher in her project and get concrete suggestions from her. The girl of sixteen who is working can do nothing better, I think, than form a walking club or a good reading club. But whatever your plan, be sure to have some definite thing around on which to centre your interest, and be sure to have your program simple and unpretentious.

Expected Too Much

Noble aspirations fired her soul. Hitherto she had been a pretty but useless little water-color-painting, crochet - working, piano - pounding sort of a girl; now she was a farm-worker.

At least she had been, earlier in the day; at the moment there were signs of a strike and she was giving the farmer a piece of her mind.

"No," she said, in firm conclusion, "I don't mind smearing the pigs, or pruning the watercress, or anything reasonable like that. But at mush-roomtime I draw the line. Why, my good man," she finished, with a maidenly blush, "I have never climbed a tree in my life!"

Our Wonderful World

The feat of freezing live fish and reviving them several weeks or months later has been achieved by the Swiss scientist, M. Pictet. The scientist put twenty-eight live fish in a box that contained water rich in oxygen, in which several pieces of ice floated. The temperature of the water was then reduced slowly until it froze. At the end of about two months the cake was gradually thawed, and the fish, it is said, were found alive.

In such an experiment, the scientist reports, it is essential that the water be gradually frozen, and that it shall have contained pieces of ice for from fifteen to eighteen hours before the whole mass is frozen. The process of thawing must also be slow.

Through this process it is believed that Siberian sturgeon and Alaskan salmon can be exported alive to distant markets.

A scheme for artificially producing rain is to be tried in Australia, where there are large sections of land that would be valuable for agricultural purposes if sufficient moisture could be insured. A captive balloon ascending to a height of six or seven thousand feet and anchored in the path of prevailing winds will be used to discharge electricity into the atmosphere, and it is hoped thus to cause sufficient ionization to provide nuclei upon which the moisture of the clouds will condense.

The Wisdom of the Stars

Make Yourself Acquainted With the Wondrous Orbs That Shone Since Before Man Was

By GARRETT P. SERVISS.

"Writing on 'The Awful Majesty of the Stars,' you recently spoke of Sirius, the most brilliant star now visible to us in the entire sky. Why not tell a poor fellow where to look for that star?—J. H."

APRIL is rather late in the year to see Sirius, for it is in mid-Winter that the great "Dog Star" reigns supreme in our sky. With the advance of Spring he and the brilliant company around him set soon after sundown, and are quickly lost in the western twilight. You may glimpse him, however, at about 8 o'clock in the evening, low in the southwest, glittering like a diamond in the shadow of the deepening night.

Northwest of him, nearer the horizon, you will see the "Three Kings" in the belt of Orion, seeming to point in the direction of Sirius. This will help you to identify him, if his majesty needs any identification. Inasmuch as he is equal to forty suns, he would, probably, be good-humoredly amused over the idea that a subject of such a petty despot as our "god of day" should have any difficulty in recognising him.

Still, even great kings when far off may be outshone by members of the common herd near by. Thus, just at present, you will find that Sirius is not comparable in splendor of appearance with our sister planet Venus, who displays her gorgeous borrowed robes every night high up in the western sky, above Orion, and becomes more dazzlingly beautiful each evening as she pirouettes round on the dancing floor of the solar system toward the side where her brother Tellus, the earth, waltzes more sedately.

MARS' REAL EYE

She seems conscious of the beaming glances of Mars, who fixes his red eye upon her from the middle of the sky, where Leo, the mythological lion, erects his mane, and sniffs at the sight of the gods and goddesses before him. Between Mars and Venus, in the zenith company of the Twins, Gemini, shine the silvery locks of ancient Saturn, interrupting the coy joks and ardent stares exchanged by the lovers banished from Olympus.

It was by indulging such poetic fancies, before astronomy had become a science, that mankind first learned to love the stars, and the astronomer who rejects them to-day shuts him eye to the most beautiful and imposing monuments that antiquity has sent down to us of man's earliest thoughts, dreams and imaginings.

The constellations form a pictured history of the human soul. The stories of Orion, of Andromeda, Perseus and Cassiopeia, of Pegasus, Ophiuchus, Ursa Major and the Guardians of the Pole, of the twelve-gemmed zone of the Zodiac, are as important to a comprehension of the mind of our race as is the legend of the Trojan war, the myths of the empires of Cyrus, of Sesostris and of Alexander.

Man's thought is stamped upon the sky. He wrote in stars before he invented hieroglyphics and letters, and the record in the heavens is far more enduring than Babylonian cylinders, Egyptian papyri or Roman tablets. The constellations will remain when the last pyramids have fallen into dust.

NOT ETERNAL

Yet even the constellations are not eternal. They are drifting apart and dissolving with the eddying of the stars that compose them. In a few hundred thousand years the aspects which they now present, and which have not notably altered since the days of Homer, will have vanished like fancied faces in the cloud.

Their apparent lastingness is a token of the ephemeral nature of human life. Everything is relative. To a sub-microscopic creature, for whom a second equalled a century, the whirling sparks of a spinning pinwheel on a Fourth of July night would seem to be eternally fixed. They would be his constellations, in whose imaginary figures he might see the heroes and heroines, the gods and goddesses of his mythology, and generations of his descendants would gaze upon them unchanged during microscopic ages.

Measured by the universe, either in size or in duration, we are such infinitesimal ephemera. But that fact only makes us appear so much the more wonderful, for do we not comprehend our own littleness? What greatness in us enables us to do this? Whence comes our grasp upon the thought of eternity? How are we able to conceive even the image of such transcendence?

Beyond all the measures of astronomy—its parallaxes, its orbits, its spectroscopic analyses—is the inspiration that has made of the simple beholder of the starry heavens. By making yourself acquainted with Sirius and the other wondrous orbs that have fixed the eyes of men since the earliest times you will open your mind to the unlooked wisdom of the stars.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

MAKE BOY FRIENDS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Having been in Boston two years and not having had the pleasure of meeting a young lady whom I cared to go out with more than a few times, I am writing to you for advice.

I am twenty and have a good salary. F. W.

IN a city as large as Boston it is very hard for a stranger to make friends. However, if you were to join the Y. M. C. A or a church you would undoubtedly meet young fellows of your own age. And if you proved yourself dignified and worthy I am sure they would in time introduce you to their sisters and friends. Is there no athletic club you care to join? A boy of your age—for after all you are only a boy—ought to find his pleasantest relaxation from business in healthful sports, and in physical relaxation you would forget any morbid worries about whether or not you have a sweetheart.

IT RESTS WITH YOUR PARENTS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Do you think it all right for a girl seventeen and another girl the same age to go about in the afternoon with two boys? Both boys are known to our families. And as I live out of town it would be hard for my mother to be with us always. They have asked us to lunch, but I hesitated in going until hearing your ideas on the subject. B. E.

YOU are rather young to go about with boys constantly, but if your parents have no objection to your coming into town occasionally and going to lunch with these boys, and if you go only to high-class restaurants and conduct yourself in such a way that you would be quite willing to have your parents know everything you are doing, you need fear no criticism.

The Easiest Way.

Tommy had a cold in his head, which confined him to the house, so he was allowed to invite his young friend, Jack, to tea.

Afterwards the two small boys commenced playing hide-and-seek, and Tommy rushed into the dining-room and asked his father to conceal him. This father did, behind a big armchair.

Presently in came Jack, and, instead of beginning his search, calmly threw himself down on the rug before the fire.

"Come, Jack," said Tommy's father, "aren't you going to look?"

"No fear!" was the small boy's calm retort. "I'm waiting till he sniffs!"

CURLEY PUT THE HENRY IN SHAKESPEARE

Who put the Henry in Shakespeare? MAYOR CURLEY!

Shakespearean scholars and others are discussing with interest today the full name of the Bard of Avon, as wished on him by the Mayor at the city's Shakespearean observances for the public at the Boston Opera House.

The poet's name, according to the Mayor, was:

William HENRY Shakespeare!

When he uttered the Henry there was a gasp from all the highbrows and even from some of the lowbrows. "Whence the Henry?" many in the audience asked each other.

Today such Shakespearean scholars as James P. Timility, Professor E. Charlton Black, Tom Giblin, Professor Barrett Wendell and "Wild Bill" Doyle deny there is any authority for handing the well-known poet the additional name of "Henry."

Professor Black said: "No authority at all, I assure you."

Be Shakespeare's name what it may, the city's observances for the public were held as per schedule, and some of the public were there. Every artist appeared as advertised. The Mayor acted as master of ceremonies and made a speech. So did Governor McCall, who ridiculed Judge Tuthill of Chicago for his assertion that Bacon wrote the Shakespeare plays.

The Symphony Orchestra played as only the Symphony Orchestra can. Mrs. Grace Hounry Williams and Michael J. Dwyer sang exceptionally well, even for them. Dr. James J. Walsh of New York, the orator, was received with tremendous enthusiasm, and as for Miss Julia Arthur (Mrs. R. D. Cheney, Jr.), who appeared at great sacrifice to herself, she quite captivated her hearers and was given an enthusiastic ovation for her impressive readings from the Bard's worrice.

TWO KILLED IN NEW YORK AUTO CRASHES

New York, April 24.—Two men were killed and another seriously injured in automobile accidents here today. John Stapleton, thirty, a taxi-cab driver, was crushed to death and his friend, Patrick Ryan, thirty, of Mt. Kisco, N. Y., was perhaps fatally injured when their machine collided with a five-ton motor truck. Robert Clark, forty-three, was killed when an automobile in which he was riding skidded into a truck.

SON OF SPRINGFIELD PUBLISHER IS DEAD

Pasadena, Cal., April 24.—Arthur G. Merriam, author, poet, composer and son of Homer Merriam, founder of the Merriam Publishing Company of Springfield, Mass., publisher of Webster's Dictionary, is dead of heart failure at his Summer home in La Canada, aged fifty-three years. Mr. Merriam had been a resident of Pasadena for thirty years. He is survived by a widow, a son and a daughter.

McCOMBS TO QUIT COMMITTEE POST

Washington, April 24.—William F. McCombs, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, has made it plain to President Wilson that he would be unable to serve, even though he might be chosen, as chairman of the committee after the St. Louis convention. Mr. McCombs communicated his intention to retire to the President and the latter has sent the chairman a letter expressing regret.

OFFICE RANSACKED, BAY RUM IS STOLEN

The offices of Gustavo Preston, a Porto Rico importer, at No. 78A Broad street, were broken into and ransacked sometime between 5:30 p. m. Saturday and 7 a. m. today. The intruder, after ransacking the offices and breaking open several boxes of imported cigars, contented himself by taking a couple of bottles of bay rum.

4 EVERETT BOYS, "NUTS," RAN AWAY

Providence, April 24. — Everett, Mass., police have been notified that Spencer Crosbee, William Fletcher James Perrick and Elmer Morse, four Everett boys, were found wandering on the street here early today. They said they left Everett Sunday night.

"Why did you leave home," asked Chief Inspector O'Neil.

"We were nuts," answered Perrick.

The boys started with $5 and had $7 when apprehended.

ORDER OF GOLDEN CROSS PLANS FAIR

The annual fair of Commandery No. 994 of the United Order of the Golden Cross will take place Tuesday evening in Moose Hall. Among the many donations which will be put on sale is a beautiful handkerchief given Mrs. L. B. Jacks by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the President. Mrs. Samuel McCall, wife of the Governor, has also contributed a gift to the society.

CHAUNCEY DEPEW 82; 'NEVER BETTER'

New York, April 24.—Chauncey M. Depew never looked better than he did on his eighty-second birthday anniversary. His friends who call to congratulate him marvelled at his bright eyes, his ruddy cheeks and his elastic step. "I not only looked well but he felt so, for he said:

"I haven't felt so fit and fine for twenty years."

Shall We Ourselves Give Japan the Opportunity for a Deadly Blow?

The letter of instructions from Mr. Hearst which follows farther down the columns is based upon the news dispatches which here precede the letter itself, and others of a like tenor.

The following is the gist of a Washington dispatch dated April 21, and published in the AMERICAN the next day: The "objectionable provisions" are contained in the Burnett Immigration Bill now before Congress:

"Viscount Chinda called at the White House to repeat to the President representations he had made formally in two memoranda presented to the State Department. He declared that the objectionable provisions discriminated against the Japanese people, and if passed they would be considered as an affront.

"One provision especially objectionable to Japan, it is said, is the classing of Japanese with Hindus in the excluded classes. Another is their putting into law the Root-Takahira gentlemen's agreement on immigration entered into by Japan and the United States.

"Japan's revival of the question at this time, when both Mexican and German crisises are engaging the Administration, attracted much interest."

The paragraphs next following are taken from a statement made by Mr. Chugo Chira, head of the East and West News Bureau, in the New York Times, on Sunday, April 23:

"It is important to remember that in entering into the Root-Takahira agreement, commonly called 'the gentlemen's agreement,' by which Japan promised to prohibit Japanese emigration to America, the Japanese feel that they have gone to their limit.

"But I fear that the passage of the Immigration Bill as it stands will be equivalent to America's asking Japan to go further, to sacrifice her national honor."

The above dispatches are sufficient explanation of the situation upon which is based Mr. Hearst's letter of instructions to the editors of his papers, which here follows:

Atlanta, Ga., April 22, 1916.

To the General Manager of the Hearst Newspapers:

Please call morning and evening editors' attention to the fact that Japan takes advantage of the first threat of difficulty with Germany formally and firmly to protest against legalizing the so-called "gentlemen's agreement" with her, limiting Japanese immigration.

Note the insolence of the Japanese assumption that we have no right to determine what people and how many shall come into our own country.

English colonies, of course, exclude Japanese immigration without protest from Japan, but Japan apparently thinks that, if England can dictate to the United States how we shall conduct our commerce and our internal business, Japan can dictate how we shall regulate our immigration, our land ownership and our citizenship.

Japan has seen that England can make us open up the Panama Canal to English vessels on a parity with our own, although we built the canal on our own territory with our own money.

Naturally, therefore, Japan thinks that she can make us open our lands and our liberties, our possessions and our privileges to the Japanese people on terms of complete equality with our own citizens. Japan knows we are unprepared.

Japan knows we have been brought to the ragged edge of trouble with Germany through the folly and vanity, the prejudice and personal ambitions of feeble and ignorant politicians.

Japan thinks that we are cowardly as well as incompetent. She feels that she can whip us into subjection and that now is a good time for her to do the job. She thinks that our country is in the hands of a weak and vacillating administration—that our heads of government are inexperienced and incompetent—that our Secretary of the Navy is a joke, and our Secretary of War a cipher.

Japan knows that the Democratic party has criminally and traitorously wasted in pork and patronage the money that should have been spent for defence. Japan knows that our guns and ammunition are being sent abroad when they should be retained at home for our protection. In a word, Japan knows she is ready for war and we are not. Therefore, Japan is insistent and insolent, and will become more insolent and more insistent as our complications increase.

The Hearst papers have predicted this situation from the beginning, and the Hearst papers have proven right in this case as in many others.

The Hearst papers have no special gift of prophecy, but they have the sense and non-partisanship to regard facts as they are and not to try to make them conform to preconceived prejudices.

There is only one remedy, and that is for the American people to cease to think and to vote as partisans and to think and to vote as patriots.

We must consider country above party.

We must vote for men who will do their duty to the nation and not be influenced by petty prejudices and personal vanities.

We must put able and experienced executives in power and get rid of theorists, doctrinaries and visionary incompetents.

Above all, we ourselves must be Americans first, last and all the time, and not pro-Allies or pro-Germans or pro-anything but pro-Americans.

We must forget our difficulties and differences over quarrels that are not ours and stand united as brothers in defence of our own rights and interests.

Let those who want to fight for foreigners go abroad and fight there, and let those who want to stand for America, for American ideals and principles and for American standards and liberties, stay at home. We may in all probability have to fight here to protect and preserve our own country, our own institutions, our own independence, and even our own existence.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

The danger pointed out by Mr. Hearst is a real danger and a deadly danger.

The Japanese government can bring 2,000,000 trained and fully armed, well equipped soldiers into the field this very day.

The dearest hope of the Japanese statesmen is that we will become entangled in this European war.

Then Japan would have, in the words of her able and astute Premer, Count Okuma, the opportunity of a thousand years.

And when the Japanese fleet and transports approached the coast of Mexico or California or Oregon or Washington they would find that THE WHOLE FLEET we have in Pacific waters, according to the statement made by its own commander to Congress within a few weeks, is not strong enough to engage ONE of the Japan dreadnoughts with any hope of success.

Even Japan requires SOME EXCUSE for making war, and His Excellency the Viscount Chinda is laying the diplomatic ground for that excuse at this very moment in Washington.

There is one thing certain, countrymen: If nothing that we can say will wake you to a realization of the menace of Japan's ambition and preparation you WILL awake to that realization when the thunder of the Japanese guns echoes in our Pacific ports and the disciplined hordes of Asia carry fire and steel to the homes of your fellow-Americans.

The Governor Has Rendered the State a Service

GOVERNOR McCALL'S message concerning the prevention of accidents and the Workingmen's Compensation Act has been misunderstood. In some quarters it has been assumed that the Governor intended to recommend the abolition of the Board of Labor and Industries and the transference of its powers and duties to the Industrial Accident Board. This assumption is incorrect and is not justified by the text of the Governor's message.

What the Governor did recommend is a very wise change in the law. He points out, what is entirely true, that the present law by assigning the duty of gathering statistics of accidents and the devising of means of preventing these accidents, based on these statistics, has caused this necessary and beneficial work to fall down between the two commissions, failing as divided duties so often fail. Therefore, he recommends that the Industrial Accident Board should be given the entire responsibility for this work. He does not suggest the abolition of the Board of Labor and Industries, but merely that it be relieved of this particular duty, thus giving it more time for its other work. It seems clear that his recommendation ought to be adopted.

Governor McCall has rendered the State, and the workingmen of the State in particular, a distinct service by pointing out a defect in a statute passed in 1913 and amending the compensation act of 1911.

He shows that, by a strict construction of the amending statute, there is danger that the Workingmen's Compensation Law might be construed by the courts to apply only to employes of counties, cities and towns, that is to say, those who are in public employ. Such a construction would destroy the benefit of the Workingmen's Compensation Act, and the Governor's recommendation that it be further amended ought, also, to be adopted.

Once-Overs

The fellow who is continually bragging about what he can do is seldom of much account.

It is the man who does things in a quick, intelligent manner who wins.

Such a man will be found at the top because he deserves to be there.

All concerns want him because he not only accomplishes much as the result of his concentrated endeavor, but his influence is good on the other employes.

Cultivate a Big Spirit

Eliminate Petty Jealousies

If You'd Do Big Things

Man Cannot Make Most of His Talents and Lead in Any Great Work If Soul Is Filled with Envy, Ill Will, Criticism and Other Small Faults

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

IF you are gifted in any special line of endeavor, if you are a painter or a poet or a musician, cultivate a big spirit of appreciation and generosity toward others if you would attain to any heights.

Of course you can perfect yourself in technique and attain success of a certain kind, without putting your heart into it. But the real success in any kind of art and, in truth, in any kind of enterprise, must come from the amount of unselfish devotion and warm-hearted enthusiasm which enters into the work.

If your heart is filled with petty jealousies, narrow ideals, envy, ill-will, and criticism toward your fellow toilers who are striving for the same goals, it will be utterly impossible for you to do big things.

It is a curious and sad fact that, on the great and glorious sea of harmony, there is so much inharmony among the voyagers. The bickerings, misunderstandings, quarrels and discords among musicians have come to be a proverbial jest. Less quarrelsome, perhaps, but far from ideal, are the relations of poets, authors and artists.

Wholesome, candid and dignified criticisms are of great value in any field of endeavor. We are stimulated to new effort and elevated to an understanding of higher ideals by kind, fair, just criticism.

There is scarcely any human being strong enough to endure continual praise, but to be just and fair criticism must be comprehensive and sympathetic.

In the world of music there are all kinds of talent—many kinds of voices, many kinds of instrumental performers, many kinds of composers, and creators and interpreters.

The heavens of literature are illumined by various kinds of stars, planets and constellations. It is this vast variety which gives the radiance to the dome into which we gaze. If we thought these stars were all bickering with one another, each filled with jealousy of the other's radiance, how contemptible it would seem. If the drops of water which make the high tide were jealous of one another, each drop desiring to be the only drop in the ocean, how ridiculous it would be.

The more gifted people there are in the world, the greater their achievements, the larger their successes, the richer earth-life becomes for all of us.

Whatever you are doing in the world, remember you are putting your own personality into it. Every thought, every emotion has its weight, and will influence your work eventually. If you are small, petty and narrow, these qualities will crop out in what you are doing. If you are big, broad and generous, those qualities will be illustrated in your achievements.

Whoever and whatever we are, we owe it to our Creator and to ourselves to be "worth while," and if we possess many gifts, or taste which can be developed into gifts, in the world of art, still higher is our obligation.

I hold it the duty of one who is gifted
And royally dowered in all men's sight
To know no rest till his life is lifted
Wholly up to his great gift's height.

He must mould the man into rare completeness,
For gems are set only in gold refined.
He must fashion his thoughts into perfect sweetness
And cast out folly and pride from his mind.

For he who drinks from a god's gold chalice
Of art or music or rhythmic song
Must sift from his soul the chaff of malice
And weed from his heart the roots of wrong.

Great gifts should be worn like a crown befitting,
And not like gems on a beggar's hands,
And the toll must be constant and unremitting
Which lifts up the king to the crown's demand.

Whatever you are doing today and however great your ambition, begin to look for something to praise in the work of others traveling along the same road. When you have found the thing to praise, speak of it. Be quick with your words of praise and slow with your words of criticism. This will lead you along an ascending path toward high goals.

Becoming Stale

By Charles F. Thwing

President Western Reserve University

EVERY age of man has its peculiar temptations. The temptation of youth is, in the case of men, appetite; in the case of women, self-consciousness.

The temptation of both men and women of middle age is the temptation of staleness. This temptation belongs especially to college-bred men. The college man who has developed, in his four academic years, a vigorous body of large and hard muscles is peculiarly open to the danger of physical staleness.

If he fail to continue his exercise in rowing or playing ball under various forms the heart that was strong becomes weak, and the lungs that were large become flabby.

His whole physical organization is subjected to special perils because of its great and abnormal development.

The peril of staleness belongs also to the intellect and the imagination. The inspirations of the cloister, the visions of highest purposes, the atmosphere of idealism, the sense of yonder-mindedness, are in peril or fading away in the light of common day.

Hard to Escape Ruts

The mountain peaks are hidden. The paths in the lowlands are inevitable, and from their ruts it is hard to lift one's self. Life's poetry becomes the daily prose, without rhythm or rhyme. The lyric is transmuted into the epic, and the epic becomes pretty real.

To this temptation of staleness not a few college men of middle age yield. They yield to it less by reason of separate forceful blows than by the slow disintegration of the general influence of materialistic, commercialized atmospheres. The struggle to make a living masters the early vision of making a life. The world overcomes the mind.

The defence, however, against such staleness is not far to seek. The defence against physical staleness for the athlete is the continuance of his athletic sports. He is to keep up the fun of daily exercise in gymnasium, on the river, on the tennis court, on the links. If this be not easy, as it probably will not be, he must at least make it an actual endeavor.

Great Reading Essential

The peril of intellectual staleness may be removed by great reading and noble thinking for at least a brief period every day. The imperativeness of immediate duty should yield to the more imperial imperativeness of the distant duty. Poetry, great prose, should be a daily portion. The portion may be small, brief in time, limited to paragraphs, yet, nevertheless, to it should be given heed.

"Give me a great thought that I may lift myself with it," is the counsel of Jean Paul.

The danger, too, of moral and human staleness may be met by the inspiration of leadership. Every man should seek to be a leader. He may be in humanity's army simply a sergeant—let him lead his small squad. He may be a captain—let him lead his hundred. He may be a colonel—let him lead his regiment. But every man of educated power may, in the trying middle period of his life, lift himself out of his moral temptations by feeling the duty and by appreciating the privilege of being an inspiring guide. The duties he owes others help him to perform the duties he owes himself.
